"THERE SHE IS —" Marie A. "Nan" Hughes of Rumson, Miss Monmouth County 1981, flashes a happy smile as she accepts the trophy from Dana Pearce, Miss Monmouth County 1980, at yesterday's pageant in the Monmouth Mall. Nan will compete for the state title in Willingboro this summer.

EATONTOWN — Fourteen Monmouth County beauties paraded looks, talent and personality in Monmouth Mall yesterday in the Miss Monmouth County Scholarship Pageant, preliminary to the Miss New Jersey contest this summer in Willingboro and the Miss America Pageant in Atlantic City.

Number 14 — Marie A. "Nan" Hughes of Rumson — became Miss Monmouth County 1981.

First runner-up was Deborah A. Ryan of Eatontown; Angelina DePaola of Long Branch was second runner-up. Third and fourth runners-up respectively were Fran Nassberg of Long Branch and Mary G. Hoffman of Red Bank.

Nan Hughes, a tall 18-year-old brunette, drew prolonged applause as she demonstrated her vocal talent, singing "I Could Have Danced All Night" in a moving and polished soprano that already shows evidence of professional refinement.

With her fellow contestants she wowed the audience and the judges in the swimsuit competition and returned in a slinky pleated evening dress, tied at the shoulders, to receive the Miss Monmouth County trophy from Dana Pearce, the 1980 titleholder.

A senior in Rumson-Fair Haven Regional High School, Nan is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Mark F. Hughes Jr. of Pebble Hill Road, Rumson.

Her father, a lawyer with offices in Newark, sparked with delight as his only daughter among four children walked off with the first-place trophy.

"Nan's everything a dad could pray for in a daughter," Hughes exclaimed. He added that Nan is first in her class at Rumson-Fair Haven Regional, has played the lead in the school play for the past four years, and has been accepted for entrance next fall by Harvard, Yale and Princeton Universities.

Mrs. Mimi Hughes, Nan's mother, teaches English in Rumson-Fair Haven Regional High School.

"I'm very proud and happy," she said, beaming.

Miss Monmouth County 1981 herself was proud and happy, too.

"My first emotion was total disbelief: all those other contestants were so beautiful and so talented. Then my second reaction came, and I've been just bubbling over ever since," she said.

Nan became interested in the pageant by watching it on television.

"Like any other little girl I watched it on TV, but the one who really got me into it was Kathy Reed, producer at the Dam Site (theater) in Tinton Falls. She's been a great help to me," Miss Monmouth County said.

Her application for the county contest was filed only a month ago, but she missed a couple of weeks of rehearsals because of a graduation-birthday trip to France given her by her parents.

"I had just a week to get ready after returning from France. But Kathy and everybody — the other contestants — they all were so supportive, and everyone helped me," she explained.

Nan hoped to take advantage of her considerable vocal talent to embark on a

Sheriff expects jail to return to 'normal'

By PAMELA JANIS

FREEHOLD TOWNSHIP — Officials of the Monmouth County Correctional Institution reported yesterday that approximately 20 inmates had been transferred to the state prison in Trenton, following a weekend disturbance which involved more than 50 inmates and 100 state, county and local law enforcement officials.

According to Monmouth County Sheriff William M. Lanzaro, county correctional authorities are prepared to resume "normal" prison activities here which were suspended when the prisoners in the dormitory-style D wing staged what went from a peaceful to rowdy demonstration Friday and Saturday.

The demonstration, which officials believe was begun by inmates to call attention to a list of their demands they presented to officials last week, was initially a peaceful "sit-in" that began at approximately 4 p.m. Friday.

The following day, according to Lanzaro, inmates set small fires in the D wing, demonstrated rowdily and used portions of free-standing metal beds to ram a three-foot in diameter circular hole in a cement wall that adjoined the E wing of the facility.

Late that afternoon, prison officials curtailed visiting hours and began serving inmates' meals in their rooms, temporarily curtailing meals in the dining room to which inmates usually have access during mealtimes.

Prison officials also suspended recreational and other privileges, including work in the prison kitchen or laundry.

But, Lanzaro said, based on reports of a "calm" yesterday, he expects that all mealtime and other privileges will be reinstated today, including visiting hours.

The sheriff vowed to prosecute instigators of the disturbance, whom he expects to be revealed by an investigation of the incident by prison officials.

Approximately 10 of the D wing inhabitants believed to encourage participation in the disturbance, Lanzaro said, were awaiting transfers to the state facility when the demonstration erupted.

An additional 10 or so inmates from other wings were transferred to Trenton with them, Lanzaro said, in an effort to help alleviate an overcrowding condition that officials say they believe to be at least partly responsible for the weekend events.

There were approximately 375 inmates in the facility at the time, Lanzaro said. The prison was built to house 325.

"Overcrowding is a significant part of the tension that affects both officers and inmates," Lanzaro said.

He also attributed the outbreak to inmate demands that include contact visit, telephone and television privileges.

A formal list of the inmates' demands had been presented to the warden last Thursday, Lanzaro said, and a reply had been expected last Wednesday.

Engaged pair die in crash

KEYPORT — A young couple, who planned to be married in September, was killed early yesterday morning when a driver apparently failed to stop at a stop sign here and his car collided with the one in which they rode, police said.

Calvin A. Garrison, 27, of 300 Orange Ave., Union Beach, and Sharon Ann Beveridge, 23, of 10 Irwin Pl., Hazlet, died as a result of injuries sustained in the collision, according to investigating patrolman John Dayback.

The two, who family members said became engaged last August following a three-year courtship, were returning from a friend's home when the accident occurred at the corner of Maple Place and Atlantic Street.

According to Dayback, Robert Edwards, 19, of 2 Eighth St., Matawan, failed to note a stop sign as he drove his car south on Atlantic Street through the intersection. His 1971 Dodge collided with the driver's side of Garrison's 1971 Toyota as that car headed east on Maple Place, knocking both vehicles on the lawn of a corner residence, Dayback said.

Edwards has been charged by police with running a stop sign, drunk driving and two counts of death by auto. He was released from Monmouth County Jail in Freehold on $30,000 bail.

A passenger in Edwards' car, Tyrone Underwood, 18, of 8 Monmouth Ave., Cliffwood, is listed in satisfactory condition at Bayshore Community Hospital, Holmdel, where he is being treated for lacerations and bruises. Edwards was treated and released from the hospital shortly after the 12:30 a.m. accident.

Garrison, who members of the South Aberdeen First Aid Squad extricated from the car with the jaws of life device, was pronounced dead on arrival at Bayshore Community Hospital.

Beveridge, who Dayback said was thrown from the car unconscious, died several hours later in the emergency room there, where both families had gathered.

"They were two people who had their whole lives ahead of them," said Beveridge's father, William. He added that Garrison's and his daughter's wedding had been completely planned, save for the mailing of invitations.

The accident had occurred, William Beveridge said, during a week-long visit home for Garrison, who had been participating in a year-long training program for General Electric Co. in Erie, Pa. Garrison had returned, according to Beveridge, to look for a job in the state following his training as an electrical engineer.

His bride-to-be was a controller for Supermarkets General, Inc., in Edison.

The couple shared a strong faith and were both fervent members of the St. John's Methodist Church, Hazlet, according to family members.

In fact, William Beveridge said, they had met three years ago at a swim party sponsored by the

To discuss O'Hern nomination

Bedell, Fiorino meet Byrne today

KEANSBURG — Sen. Eugene J. Bedell, D-Monmouth, said last night he and Monmouth County Democratic Chairman John R. Fiorino would meet this morning with Gov. Brendan T. Byrne to discuss the governor's nomination of former Red Bank Mayor Daniel J. O'Hern to the state Supreme Court.

Bedell said he would ask the governor not to place the nomination before the Senate Judiciary Committee today, so that he wouldn't be forced to exercise senatorial courtesy to block the appointment of O'Hern.

"Since the appointment is not going to be made until the middle of August, perhaps a compromise could be worked out beforehand," said the senator. "It's quite possible that this could be resolved by June, if not before."

"Then, I wouldn't be forced to exercise senatorial courtesy, and a lot of people would be spared embarrassment."

Bedell says he is blocking the O'Hern nomination because he thinks the time has come to consider a woman or a minority for the state's highest court.

A high-placed source close to Fiorino has told the Daily Register that Bedell is blocking the O'Hern nomination on the orders of Fiorino, who reportedly is at odds with the Byrne administration over a number of issues.

Both Fiorino and Bedell have denied the report.

Bedell said that the governor's chief of staff, Harold Hodes of Manalapan, is also expected to attend the meeting at Morven, the governor's mansion in Princeton.

Hodes said last week that the governor would place the nomination of O'Hern, who is the governor's counsel, before the judiciary committee today.

Bedell says that it is unnecessary for the governor to move so quickly on the nomination since Associate Justice Mark A. Sullivan, who O'Hern was nominated to replace, is not slated to retire until Aug. 11.

Bedell said he had received a letter from leaders of a number of women's groups endorsing his stand that a woman should be considered for the Supreme Court.

The letter proposed eight women, including one Monmouth County resident, as "eminently qualified" to serve on the state Supreme Court, Bedell said.

Florence Peskoe, a Juvenile and Domestic Relations Court judge in Monmouth County was on the list.

Also named were Marie Garibaldi, a Newark attorney; Virginia Long, a state Superior Court judge from Union County; Judy Yaskin, former acting state attorney general; Marilyn Loftus, a state Superior Court judge from Essex County; Judge Sonia Morgan of the Appellate Division of the state Superior Court; Judge Sylvia Pressler, also of the Appellate Division; and Anne Thompson, a U.S. District Court judge from Lawrenceville.

Signing the letter, said Bedell, were Eileen B. Thorton of the Women's Political Caucus of New Jersey; Linda Solway of the New Jersey Division of the Women's Equity Action League; Christine Carmody-Arey, coordinator for the New Jersey

Moral Majority finds itself in the minority The Inside Story

By MARK GRAVEN

FREEHOLD — Two Moral Majority representatives found themselves in a minority yesterday when they appeared in a panel discussion before 300 people at the Monmouth County Library headquarters.

The pair, the Rev. Harry Vickery, president of the state chapter of the Moral Majority, and the Rev. Charles Horton, a Moral Majority activist, met with a barrage of hostile questions, sarcastic remarks, and heckling from the audience over their stands on abortion, capital punishment, the Equal Rights Amendment, homosexuality, prayer, in the schools, and evolution.

Lauren Selden, executive director of the New Jersey chapter of the American Civil Liberties Union, and the Rev. Albert W. Gibson, pastor of Hope Lutheran Church, Freehold Township, were on the four-man panel to offer opposition to or comments on the viewpoints of the Moral Majority representatives.

Gibson and Selden received loud applause for several of their remarks.

At one point, Vickery asked: "Is there anybody out there with any sympathy for the Moral Majority?"

"Yeah, we have a lot of sympathy for you," responded a male voice from the audience, sarcastically.

Judy Wolt, a librarian who helped organized the panel discussion noted that the event was planned to give people information about the Moral Majority, but she said it appeared that many people had come with their opinions already formed.

Jack Field, chief librarian at the headquarters, who moderated the panel discussion and question-and-answer period, several times asked some members of the audience who were guffawing or jeering at Hickory and Horton, to be quiet.

Some of the most spirited objections to the Moral Majorityites came from feminists, sporting buttons advocating "Choice" in abortions.

One woman questioned the right of the Moral Majority as to its name.

"Are you saying that everybody who doesn't agree with you is immoral?" she asked. She also requested that Vickery and Horton provide statistics to prove that their organization represented the majority of Americans.

"We are not saying everybody else is immoral," said Vickery.

"Some of my best preacher friends don't belong to the Moral Majority," said Horton.

Vickery said that public opinion polls showed that a majority of Americans agreed with the Moral Majority on the issues.

In explaining their viewpoints, Vickery and Horton, often resorted to scripture.

"Anybody who has not read the Bible is not stupid, but he is not educated," Vickery said.

Vickery and Horton advocated a "pro-life" stance on abortion.

"I can't think of anything that deserves more reproach than the edict by the (U.S.) Supreme Court that allows the mass murder of hundreds of thousands of pre-born babies," said Vickery.

Selden said it was a "very clever strategy" to use the term pro-life. But he added: "I don't consider myself anti-life in advocating a women's right to make decisions regarding her own body."

The moral majority representatives also took a strong

Desert town hit by earthquake

WESTMORLAND, Calif. — A strong earthquake shook this desert community yesterday, destroying at least two buildings and damaging others, cutting water supplies, causing a road to "just sink out of sight" and damaging an irrigation canal.

"My town's almost a disaster area," said Mayor Ron Rodriguez, surveying the damage from the quake which registered 5.6 on the Richter scale. "We've lost all our water. There's a lot of damage to homes."

No injuries were reported after the quake, the largest in a "swarm" of more than three dozen quakes above magnitude 3.0 that have jiggled this area since Friday evening.

But the quake, which struck at 5:09 a.m. PDT, caused extensive damage to this aging community, where many structures are built from adobe and red brick. Adobe is sun-dried clay.

Geologists at the California Institute of Technology in Pasadena and the U.S. Geological Survey at Golden, Colo., said they expected the seismic activity to continue for some time.

Car industry may be recovering

DETROIT — U.S. automakers turned to rebates to boost sales in the first quarter of 1981, but the rebates also increased industrywide losses to as much as $600 million, according to industry analysts.

At the same time, however, analysts say improving sales and cost-reduction efforts by the automakers are signs that the industry may be recovering.

General Motors Corp., Ford Motor Co. and Chrysler Corp. are expected to report their first-quarter earnings this week, and the company statements — except GM's — are expected to be drenched in red ink once again.

American Motors Corp. led the parade of first-quarter reports April 17 when it announced a loss of $52.7 million for the quarter that ended March 31.

Jouppi said he expected GM to report a profit of about $150 million for the quarter, while Ford and Chrysler would lose — Ford about $360 million and Chrysler about $275 million.

That would mean an industrywide loss of about $538 million for the quarter, $80 million more than the $458 million total loss the automakers reported in the first quarter last year.

Bills may increase due to strike

LOUISVILLE, KY. — While non-union operators in Kentucky's eastern coalfields steeled themselves for renewed violence today as they re-opened their mines, the U.S. secretary of commerce said a prolonged strike by the United Mine Workers could result in higher utility bills.

Independent coal operators in five counties decided last week that they would reopen their mines today, the 32nd day of the walkout, despite two shooting incidents involving non-union truck drivers that left six men injured.

"What we're telling you here is that we're going to have a war come Monday," Landmark Mining Co. President Thomas Ratliff told officials last week.

Kentucky Gov. John Y. Brown Jr. responded by saying he would call on the National Guard only if the situation dictated it, adding that he would not "babysit" non-union operators.

Many non-union mines shut down late last week after the shooting incidents. Others had been closed since the start of the strike.

Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige said yesterday that while the nation's coal exports have dropped substantially since the strike began March 27, the strike has had no apparent impact on operations of U.S. industries.

Families exposed to pesticides?

WASHINGTON — The Army Times and its companion newspapers reported in today's editions that thousands of families may have been exposed to pesticides while living in military housing.

Pentagon spokesman Bill Caldwell said the Defense Department is "studying the matter to determine whether or not we should commence a large scale inspection and monitoring program for military housing units."

The copyrighted story said the problem involves some 31,000 sets of quarters constructed over the last 25 years on concrete slab foundations with forced air heating and cooling ducts in or under the slabs.

Many civilian homes have also been constructed in this manner, according to the report in Army Times, Navy Times and Air Force Times.

The newspapers said the danger arises when the chemical chlordane is used to control termites.

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Wayne L. Hays, a U.S. congressman who was forced from office by a sex scandal, is expected to spend five or six days in the hospital recovering from cancer surgery, his surgeon says.

Last fall, the 68-year-old Hays underwent surgery for cancer of the lip, said Dr. Arthur G. James. The surgeon said Hays was in good condition at Ohio State University Hospital after surgery Friday for cancer of the neck. James said the cancer appeared to have been localized.

Hays, a Democrat who served as chairman of the House Administration Committee, was a congressman for nearly 30 years before stepping down in 1976 after his affair with Elizabeth Ray, who was half his age, became public.

BERLIN (AP) — Former Hitler deputy Rudolf Hess, a prisoner of his former World War II enemies for nearly 40 years, marked his 87th birthday yesterday in a British military hospital. Police said eight men dressed in black shirts, black pants and black leather jackets observed five minutes of silence and laid a wreath outside Spandau prison, where Hess has been serving a life sentence imposed by the Nuremberg War Crimes tribunal. The men were not identified.

By attempt on Reagan's life

Bush forced to walk a tightrope

By TERENCE HUNT
Second in a series

WASHINGTON (AP) — On day 70 of the Reagan administration, George Bush came closer to the presidency than he ever did in his long White House campaign. Did it ever cross his mind that day that an assassin's bullet might thrust him into power?

Yes. "I won't lie about it, but I didn't dwell on it," the vice president recalls now. "What I dwelled on is how do you do your job, define what your job is and then do it when the president is in the hospital instead of sitting in the Oval Office."

"Because," said Bush, "there was never any lingering, long period of doubt as to whether the president was going to rapidly recover or not, if you look back on it."

"There might have been an hour or two of that kind of wonder," he added in an interview as the Reagan administration neared its 100th day in office.

Pushed onto center stage by Reagan's recuperation, Bush now walks a tightrope between filling in for his convalescing boss and taking pains to make sure he doesn't look like a grandstander.

To carry off the balancing act, the vice president draws on an abundant supply of public humility.

"I have no illusions that I'm something other than the vice president," Bush said. "I'll go right back into the background" when Reagan returns to the Oval Office.

For now, however, Bush is in the spotlight — presiding over meetings of the Cabinet and National Security Council for Reagan, attending to White House visitors as a substitute host and standing in for the president at speaking engagements and ceremonies.

Long before the assassination, Bush — the moderate challenger to Reagan for the GOP presidential nomination — had proven himself a loyal team player.

"If the president asked me to do something that I didn't feel I could do," Bush said, "I would tell him that, and if he still wanted me to do it, knowing that I felt unqualified or that I couldn't put the right emphasis on it or something, why I'd do it anyway."

Lyn Nofziger, White House political director, says of Bush: "I have never heard him poor mouth or denigrate or downgrade or imply in any way that he was less than enthusiastically supportive of this president."

"I think he's been superb. You couldn't find anybody really to have accept the vice president's role and carry it out in a better fashion than George has."

Reagan picked Bush as his manager of foreign crises, leaving Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. the clear loser in a power struggle for the title.

Perhaps the best measure of Bush's standing was a comment Reagan made at his 70th birthday party to the vice president's wife Barbara. According to the Washington Post, Reagan said:

"I want to ask you a very personal question. Is George happy with his job? Does he feel what he's doing is worthwhile? I just want to be sure he's doing enough. If the awful-awful should happen, George should know everything."

Says Bush: "I think this relationship is working very well."

Howard Phillips, director of the Conservative Caucus, agrees that Bush "has been a good boy in carrying out the assignments President Reagan has given him. But basically he has a different vision of the country's future than Reagan has ... My concern is that if anything were to happen to President Reagan, his policies would be unlikely to enjoy the kind of success they would enjoy" under Reagan.

Whenever he's in public, Bush goes out of his way to talk about his boss.

"Substituting for President Reagan as a guest speaker is a little like being called on to pinch-hit for (baseball superstar) George Brett in Kansas City," Bush recently told a Republican gathering. "There just isn't any way you can do the job as well as the man you're filling in for."

Standing in for Reagan at a speech in Tuskegee, Ala., Bush mentioned the president four times in just the first page of his speech.

Of his own efforts for the administration, Bush says his biggest contribution is "being here, doing the job. I don't go around suggesting there's been some massive individual contribution."

Along with his recently increased responsibilities, Bush has won a huge surge in his popularity.

In an Associated Press-NBC News poll, 69 per cent of the people questioned gave the vice president good or excellent marks for his performance after the assassination attempt. That was more than double the rating he had in a similar poll in February.

By comparison, 66 per cent of those questioned in April gave Reagan good or excellent marks.

French election winds up in runoff

PARIS (AP) — President Valéry Giscard d'Estaing and Socialist Francois Mitterrand won the most votes in a field of 10 candidates in yesterday's first round of the presidential election and will meet in a runoff contest next month.

Giscard d'Estaing, running for a second seven-year term, defeated Mitterrand in a runoff in 1974 by a slim 1.6 percent margin. Yesterday results set the stage for the rematch May 10 since no candidate won an absolute majority.

With nearly 28.9 million votes counted out of an expected 30 million, Giscard d'Estaing had 28 percent and Mitterrand, who is making his third bid for the presidency, 26 percent.

Gaullist leader Jacques Chirac, mayor of Paris and a former premier under Giscard d'Estaing, was third with 18 percent followed by Communist Party chief Georges Marchais with 15.4 percent.

Freezing rain on the French Riviera and a dusting of snow elsewhere limited the turnout. The Interior Ministry estimated that 80.7 percent of the more than 36 million registered voters had cast their ballots, compared with 84.2 percent in 1974.

In addition to the "top four" candidates, the others running were Michel Debre, a former premier and old-line Gaullist; Marie-France Garaud, a Gaullist-minded independent; Michel Crepeau, leader of the Radical Left Movement; Huguette Bouchardeau, representing the Unified Socialist Party; Arlette Laguiller, leader of the Trotskyist Workers Struggle, and Brice Lalonde, running on the ecologist ticket.

The best-placed among the six minor candidates appeared to be Lalonde, with 3.9 percent of the popular vote.

Speaking to reporters after the results became clear, Giscard d'Estaing proposed two televised debates with Mitterrand before the second round. He said the first should cover economic and social issues and the second foreign policy and security.

Of his opponent, Giscard d'Estaing said: "Mr. Mitterrand needs the Communist votes. I will represent ... all those who reject bureaucracy and Marxism."

Mitterrand, speaking of the first-round vote, said, "We must now assemble ... those who have chosen change — against unemployment, social injustices and inequalities. They are the majority."

The key to the runoff in two weeks may be the positions taken by the two losers among the major candidates — Gaullist Chirac and Communist Marchais. Chirac said he would make his position known today. Marchais said the matter would be put before the party's Politburo tomorrow.

A lackluster campaign focused primarily on economics, with all nine challengers criticizing Giscard d'Estaing for permitting unemployment to rise to 7.3 percent of the work force. The president asserted that his record was good, considering the state of the world economy.

Battleship New Jersey stirs fight

WASHINGTON (AP) — The battleship U.S.S. New Jersey, a majestic veteran of World War II, is involved in another battle. This time, though, the fight is in the halls of Congress, not off the shores of Iwo Jima.

The Navy wants to take the New Jersey and at least one sister ship out of mothballs and send them to sea in the age of the nuclear missile.

The plan has stirred one of the few disputes on military affairs issues in a Congress generally agreeable to the Reagan administration's strong-defense policies.

Supporters of the proposed reactivation of the New Jersey and the U.S.S. Iowa say it is the quickest way to bolster a U.S. fleet that the Navy fears has lost its slight edge over the Russians.

Opponents argue that the money — estimated at $326 million for the New Jersey alone — could be better spent on sleek, new vessels than on aging titans that they say would take too many sailors to man.

"I just can't understand why we have to put all our eggs in two old baskets," says Sen. Ted Stevens, R-Alaska, chairman of the Senate subcommittee on defense appropriations.

Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, chairman of the Armed Services Committee, supports the battleship plan. In fact, he has a blown-up color photograph of the New Jersey, guns blazing, on his office wall.

Tower steered an initial $89 million authorization — to be spent on the New Jersey in the balance of this fiscal year — through the Senate despite a move by Sen. Dale Bumpers, D-Ark., to free the money for new ship construction.

"The New Jersey is a majestic ship," Bumpers said. "It is a beautiful thing to see out on the ocean. But ... we are not voting on beauty or majesty."

"We are voting on how we can spend our defense dollars to provide the U.S. Navy with the most cost effective and most serviceable ships to keep the sea lanes open."

The Senate rejected Bumpers' move on a 60-23 vote after Tower argued, "We need more ships and we need them now, not later."

The money still needs to be appropriated, however. Appropriations panels are expected to act in the House this week and in the Senate early next month.

Adm. Thomas B. Hayward, chief of naval operations, has told the Senate subcommittee that the Navy envisions all four Iowa-class battleships built in World War II as part of its proposed 600-ship fleet. The Navy now has 456 surface ships and submarines, but no battleships. The Iowa-class vessels — including the Missouri and the Wisconsin as well as the New Jersey and the Iowa — are mothballed at naval shipyards. The Navy is asking funds for next year to work on both the New Jersey and Iowa.

The New Jersey, launched in 1943, was retired at the end of World War II but was brought back for service in both the Korean and Vietnam wars. Navy plans calling for arming her with cruise missiles as well as the existing 16-inch guns.

The Iowa-class vessels are the most heavily armored U.S. warships ever built and the largest battleships in history, except for two that the Japanese used in World War II. The ships have 12-inch hulls and conning tower sides that are more than 17 inches thick.

Reagan budget seen gaining

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress, which left President Reagan's economic program in limbo two weeks ago, returns from recess to find momentum swinging back to the administration and to hear the recuperating chief executive himself offer cooperation but not compromise.

Reagan goes before a joint session of the House and the Senate at 9 p.m. EDT tomorrow — his first public appearance since the attempt on his life almost a month ago — to make a pitch for his tax and budget-cutting plan.

The president spent the weekend polishing the speech at his Camp David, Md., retreat. White House spokesman Larry Speakes said Reagan intends to tell Congress and a national television audience that "now is the time to act" on his program.

The administration's offensive is two-pronged: to cement Republican support in the Senate and to gain Democratic votes in the House. Both seem to be working.

The House had been expected to be the stiffest test, but head counts by both parties last week showed considerable new Democratic support for a slightly modified Reagan program — perhaps more than enough to pass it after the House begins debate Thursday.

In the Senate, Budget Committee Republicans scheduled a vote today on a plan to allay conservative skepticism about Reagan's ability to balance the budget by 1984. That was the issue that derailed the president's program on April 9, when three Republicans joined the panel's Democrats in turning down a budget-cutting package for fiscal 1982 because of projections it still would leave a $60 billion deficit.

The proposed settlement, which over the weekend appeared to have gathered enough support to win approval, would trim the projected deficit to $45 billion, Reagan's original estimate.

In the administration view, that's merely an adjustment, not affecting the program's basic philosophy. Speakes said Reagan's speech will promise to cooperate but not to compromise, especially on his proposed 30 percent tax cut over three years, which many members of Congress are reluctant to accept.

Tax cut proposals get some support in study

WASHINGTON (AP) — Tax cuts, such as those proposed by the Reagan administration, would give at least some boost to investment and to Americans' eagerness to work, according to a book of new economic studies published by the Brookings Institution.

But tax cuts can do only so much without structural changes in taxation laws, according to the independent economists whose studies are published in the new book.

The volume covers studies presented by the economists at a 1979 conference, long before President Reagan and his "supply-siders" arrived in Washington.

The analysts, therefore, do not address Reagan's plans. But they do write of possible effects that tax cuts can have on the supply of labor, on business investment and in other economic areas.

"Taken together, those findings support the argument that tax cuts will stimulate work and investment, but the cuts will not generate a supply response large enough to pay for themselves," says a Brookings summary released Sunday.

"At least as important as tax cuts are reforms in tax structure to prevent inflation from continuing to distort the kinds of investments business and individuals make," it says.

In one specific area, the Brookings summary says, "the labor supply response to tax changes may be higher than was believed in the past."

It notes that Jerry A. Hausman, an economics professor at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, contends in one of the book's studies that the combination of the current progressive federal income tax and the payroll tax lead a male wage-earner who makes $8,000 to $12,000 a year to work 8 percent less than he would if he paid no taxes.

Archbishop: Inner space look needed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Archbishop of Canterbury, while hailing the space shuttle's flight into outer space, said yesterday man needs to explore "inner space" which harbors the fears and the desire to dominate which are the sources of the violence and the divisions which disfigure the world.

In a sermon at the Washington Cathedral, Archbishop Robert A. K. Runcie said "there is a terrifying disparity between our technical achievements and our moral progress."

He said "it is terrifying because technical achievement has made this into an even more dangerous world where we possess the capacity to destroy civilization."

Even the space shuttle, he said, is being discussed in terms of its military potential. The archbishop said when the space shuttle becomes operational it could be "an important contribution to increasing the sum of mutual understanding in the world and to thwarting the ambitions of those rulers who would keep their countries isolated from the rest of mankind."

He said that "in a dangerous and frightening world there is a tendency for people to retreat into narrowly based and simplistic visions of reality, into conspiracy theories which identify the big ogre as red, or imperialism, or capitalism, or some other 'ism'."

"The first thing the Christian Church ought to stand for is reverence for the word, respect for the truth and an opposition to any attempt to stir up fear and violence by labeling or dividing mankind into devils and angels," he said.

"In a world where hatreds are fueled by 'isms', ideologies and national dreams which divide men from men," he said, Christians should "assert the ideal of a universal brotherhood which does not recognize the distinctions between slave and free, Jew and Greek, male and female."

He told the congregation that "you may have heard about the riots in the Brixton area of London a week or so ago when black youths clashed with the police."

"The night after, I was marching through the streets of another part of London — Notting Hill — which was the scene of serious racial disturbances five years ago. The multiracial crowd of 3,000 who took part in the Holy Week procession and who followed the way of the cross through the streets were living witnesses of the brotherhood which can come from careful and self-sacrificing Christian work."

Today, the archbishop will preside at the opening of a meeting of the 28 primates of the Anglican Church, the first held outside England.

Torahs stolen from synagogue

LAKEWOOD — Six valuable holy scrolls, worth about $20,000 each, were apparently stolen from a synagogue in this Ocean County community over the weekend, police said.

The scrolls, called Torahs, were discovered missing shortly before 8 a.m. Saturday as Ralph Michael, a member of Congregation Ahavat Shalom's executive board, was preparing the temple for morning sabbath services, said police Lt. Wayne LeCompte.

The robber, who broke a window to enter the synagogue, apparently knew where to find the religious items, LeCompte said.

Investigate murder of teacher

LEONIA — Bergen County authorities were investigating the strangulation-murder of an elementary school teacher in his garden apartment.

Thomas Jan Stroger, 33, had taught for about 10 years in Old Tappan elementary schools. A friend found his body lying on his bed about 7 p.m. Friday, said Bergen County Prosecutor Roger W. Breslin Jr.

The victim was clothed only in a shirt and necktie that had been twisted into a garrote, he said.

Police found no sign of forced entry or struggle and believe the murderer stole the victim's car. The friend who discovered the body was not considered a suspect, police said.

Jersey drivers top scofflaw list

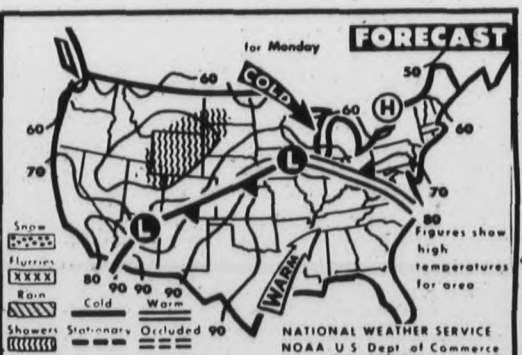

NEWARK — More than 150,000 New Jersey motorists owe New York City about $70 million in unpaid parking tickets, but defiant scofflaws often conduct court battles to avoid paying the fines, officials say.

"New Jersey is our big headache," said Anna Gottfried, deputy director of the New York City Parking Violations Bureau, "and while there has been marked improvement in getting out-of-state motorists to answer summonses, there is always the hardcore scofflaw."

Motorists from Connecticut, Pennsylvania and Florida are well represented on the list of parking outlaws, but more drivers from New Jersey ignore the tickets than from any other state, Ms. Gottfried says.

Thousands of New Jersey motorists have racked up 10 tickets or more, while some individuals may owe as much as $15,000 each, officials say.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The search for a new U.S. attorney in New Jersey appears far from settled with no fewer than five names circulating for the job.

Three names mentioned in recent weeks are former assistant U.S. attorneys. Two others are lawyers who have worked exclusively in private practice.

Although there has been no attempt at reaching a consensus within the state's congressional delegation, four of the seven Republicans have lined up behind Kenneth P. Zauber, 43, of Ewing Township.

In Zauber's corner are Reps. Matthew Rinaldo of Union, Millicent Fenwick of Bernardsville, Chris Smith of Old Bridge and James Courter of Hackettstown.

Rinaldo wrote Attorney General William French Smith on March 23, calling Zauber a candidate "who not only qualifies on merit, but who also has exhibited a deep commitment to the president and his policies."

Mrs. Fenwick said in a letter to Smith on April 1 that Zauber "would make a fine U.S. attorney and would bring honor to the U.S. Department of Justice."

Smith and Courter signed a third letter April 2 in which they said they "highly endorse and recommend" Zauber.

"He will bring to the office of United States Attorney both great professional skill and a strong commitment to the policies and mandate of the president," they said.

Zauber was an assistant U.S. attorney in the mid-1960s under former U.S. Attorney David M. Satz Jr. He served as counsel to the New Jersey State Commission of Investigation from 1969-70 and as chief trial attorney for the state Division of Criminal Justice between 1970 and 1975.

He also has a political background, serving as chairman of the Mercer County Republican Committee from 1979 to 1980.

Another name prominently mentioned is W. Hunt Dumont, 39, a partner in the politically-connected Newark law firm of Robinson, Wayne and Greenberg.

Dumont, who lives in Summit, is the son of state Sen. Wayne Dumont, R-Warren. He worked as an assistant U.S. attorney in charge of the criminal division from 1969 to 1971 under former U.S. Attorneys Frederick B. Lacey and Herbert J. Stern.

The third candidate with experience as an assistant U.S. attorney is Garrett E. Brown Jr., 38, now in private practice in Newark.

Brown succeeded Dumont as deputy chief of the criminal division in the U.S. attorney's office in 1971. He later became executive assistant U.S. attorney with general supervisory powers over the entire office.

The two lawyers in private practice whose names have circulated are Richard Donohue, 41, of Hillsdale and Conrad Koch, 48, of West Orange.

Donohue practices law in Hackensack and has been in private practice since receiving his law degree from Seton Hall in 1967. He was in the same class as Dumont.

Koch has been in private practice since 1961 and led the Essex County Lawyers for Reagan last year.

The selection process has proven exasperating to at least one of the Republican congressmen from New Jersey, Rep. Harold Hollenbeck of East Rutherford. He said he hasn't been consulted by the White House for his advice on the appointment.

"We have a situation where we don't have an incumbent Republican U.S. senator so we should be working together," Hollenbeck said. "By not doing so, we are letting the Jesse Helmses and the Strom Thurmonds appoint U.S. attorneys for New Jersey, and I think that's unacceptable," he said.

Rep. Marge Roukema, a freshman from Ridgewood, said she hasn't decided on whom to support for the federal prosecutor's post.

Rep. Edwin Forsythe, the congressional dean of the New Jersey Republicans, was away on vacation last week and could not be reached, but it is believed he has not endorsed anyone for the job.

Smith's office has been contacted by the Justice Department, which was looking for additional nominees. The department suggested last month that sponsors of candidates for U.S. attorney's posts submit three to five names. The department proposed setting up a selection panel of professionals to screen possible choices.

Mrs. Fenwick said she thinks the entire delegation — Democrats and Republicans — should be consulted on developing a consensus choice for the job.

"I may be going farther than my colleagues would support me," she said, "but I think there should be a line of demarcation between justice and politics."

Sen. Harrison A. Williams Jr.'s legal defense fund reported last week it raised another $5,105 from 35 contributors for the senator's defense in the Abscam case.

The fund filed a report with the Senate covering contributions and spending from March 23 through March 31. Earlier, the fund reported it had raised just over $60,500 from 342 donors between April 1980 and March 23.

The biggest contribution in the latest report was $2,500 from the International Chiropractors Political Action Committee of Washington, D.C.

The defense fund said it spent $9,000 during the period, leaving the fund with an overall balance of $8,123 on March 31. Williams' legal expenses are expected to run substantially higher than the $65,800 total raised through March 31.

The 61-year-old New Jersey Democrat is on trial in Brooklyn, N.Y., on charges of bribery and conspiracy.

State Senate mulls financial disclosure bill

TRENTON (AP) — Gubernatorial and legislative candidates would be required to reveal their sources of income under a bill set for final legislative action today in the state Senate.

The measure, sponsored by Sen. Charles Yates, D-Burlington, is designed to provide voters with a list of the possible areas of influence upon candidates.

Yates, who is not seeking re-election, said the measure would help voters by removing doubts about the origin of income for elected officials.

Both houses have adopted the measure, but the Senate must agree with an Assembly amendment to include gubernatorial candidates.

The Senate also has votes scheduled on proposals to expand farmworkers' rights and require farmers to pay unemployment insurance to workers.

The upper house also plans to vote on a bill increasing from $125 to $150 the annual "lifelife" credits on utility bills for about 300,000 elderly and disabled residents.

The bill, sponsored by Senate President Joseph P. Merlino, D-Mercer, would increase the payments to $175 by October 1982 if funds are available.

The Assembly also returns here for a session featuring scheduled votes on bills to exclude urban aid from the annual restrictions on increasing municipal spending and to make major changes in the Civil Service laws.

Under a measure sponsored by Assemblyman Albert Burstein, D-Bergen, the Civil Service Commission would be replaced by a new Department of Personnel where the commissioner would establish a merit system for both unclassified and career service state jobs.

"Absolute preference" for veterans in obtaining Civil Service jobs would be maintained.

The Assembly also has a vote scheduled on a measure to exclude aviation gasoline from the motor fuel tax.

The measure, sponsored by Assembly Minority Leader James Hurley, R-Cumberland, would cut about $400,000 from annual state revenue, according to the Division of Taxation.

Gov. Brendan T. Byrne is expected to formally submit the nomination of Daniel O'Hern to be a state Supreme Court justice.

The nomination of O'Hern, Byrne's chief counsel, would have to be forwarded to the Senate Judiciary Committee, which has a meeting scheduled.

State Sen. Eugene Bedell, D-Monmouth, said last week he planned to invoke senatorial courtesy to block the nomination on grounds Byrne should appoint a woman or a minority to the state's highest court.

Senatorial courtesy is a tradition in which a senator can block a gubernatorial nomination without explanation if the nominee comes from his or her home county. O'Hern lives in Red Bank and is a former mayor there.

Byrne said he was confident the Senate would approve the nomination of O'Hern. His aides were dispatched to meet with Bedell and try to change his mind about invoking senatorial courtesy.

Sheriff: All now normal to them," Lanzaro said. He added that inmates had given officials no warning that they might stage a demonstration and did not appear to be organized.

"The majority of them did not want to be involved," Lanzaro said of the D wing inmates. He added that many appeared to join for fear of retaliation by other inmates, including those waiting for transfer to Trenton.

When the investigation presumably determines which individuals are responsible for the outbreak, the sheriff added, he intends to prosecute.

"If I can find any cases where I can charge specific inmates," Lanzaro said, "I'll prosecute. I will not tolerate any destruction of that jail."

Damage to the facility, he said, appeared to be minimal. The wall adjoining the wings and the dismantled beds, Lanzaro added now seem to be the only evidence of the inmates' activities.

Both are expected to be repaired or replaced by the prison maintenance crew tonight.

"Certainly by Tuesday," Lanzaro said.

He said the facility's ranking official, Lt. Eric Allen, had reported that yesterday was "a perfectly normal day."

Responding to allegations from Saturday visitors who reported being ushered from the prison grounds after hearing from inmates that a "riot" had broken out, Lanzaro said the event had been misinterpreted by those immediately present but uninvolved.

"Somebody may have jumped the gun and used the word 'riot,'" Lanzaro said, "but the difference between a riot and a disturbance is that in a riot you go in there and hand them their heads. We didn't have to use force," he added, "because once they saw we had the numbers, they were like pussycats."

Lanzaro added that he believes prison officials treat inmates there well and that he did not expect further disturbances concerning their pending list of demands.

"We treat them pretty fairly up there," the sheriff said. "We don't abuse them. We feed them well and when they behave, we give them the chance to work."

Earlier in his career, O'Hern had been Sea Bright planning board attorney.

chapter of the National Organization for Women; Mary Gray, president of the New Jersey Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs, Inc., and Jo Doig, chairwoman of the women's rights section of the New Jersey State Bar Association.

Bedell noted that a woman has never been appointed to the state Supreme Court, a fact which he said he would remind the governor.

The senator said that he himself was not prepared to recommend a name for appointment to the court.

Bedell said he also intended to remind the governor that there are some 200 "holdover positions," (appointments that would extend past the governor's own term) for the governor to fill before he leaves office.

Bedell said the appointments to the holdover positions give the governor "a lot of leeway."

The senator noted that women and minorities could be appointed to fill these positions.

"We've got to give some credence to the fact that we're attempting to reflect the constituency of this state," Bedell said.

Bedell said that he had "no idea" what percentage of state jobs are presently filled by women and minorities, but he asserted that it is obvious that there should be greater representation from these groups in state posts.

Moral Majority in minority role stand for capital punishment, arguing that it was a "deterrent against crime."

Gibson disputed the contention that capital punishment deters crime.

Vickery and Horton said that although they opposed the Equal Rights Amendment, they were not against women's rights.

"ERA will bring about the enslavement of women," Vickery asserted. "It will put pressure on them to perform duties they are not biologically capable of doing."

Gibson said that ERA is only intended to "clearly spell out" that "equality of rights not be denied or abridged on account of sex."

Vickery said that ERA would "open up a Pandora's box, allowing secular humanists to move in 'eventually resulting in the country being taken over by 'socialism, atheism, and un-Americanism.'"

Horton and Vickery asserted that passage of ERA would give homosexuals an opportunity to "impose their lifestyle" on others.

"I certainly don't believe that homosexuals should be taken out and shot, but I do believe that homosexuality is a sin," said Horton. "I love homosexuals, but hate the sin of homosexuality."

A young man in the audience, told Horton: "I doubt the validity of your love for me."

Gibson said that to live under the rule of God is to live under "the law of love." Accordingly, he said, people should attempt to understand, accept, and get along with homosexuals, even "without knowing what makes them tick."

Selden said the issue was one of what should be done as a matter of public policy regarding homosexuality.

"What do you propose — that we deny million of Americans the opportunity to work, or retain lawyers?" Selden asked.

Vickery said he didn't want to see gay teachers advocating their lifestyles in the classroom. "They should keep it (their sexual preferences) a secret," he said.

Vickery and Horton took a strong position in favor of prayer in the public schools.

"The saddest thing that ever happened in the U.S. was the formation of a secular school system," said Vickery.

Gibson countered that "prayer is a private relationship with God — not something that should be legislated or planned as part of an education program."

Despite the doubts registered by members of the audience, Vickery and Horton asserted they were in favor of "separation of church and state."

These assertions led one woman in the audience to remark: "The noise you just heard outside was Thomas Jefferson rolling over in his grave."

Vickery and Horton argued that the "Creation Story" from the Bible should be included on an equal footing with the scientific theory of evolution in the classroom.

Selden said that certain facts of evolutionary theory are "not disputed by any reputable scientist. The biblical story of creation should not have equal footing with something that is scientific knowledge," he argued.

Members of the audience expressed their concern about the Moral Majority's involvement in politics. One person questioned Vickery and Horton about whether their organization put out a "hit list" on candidates they wanted to lose elections.

Vickery and Horton denied the existence of the hit list, but they did admit to holding political preferences.

Vickery said before the panel discussion that he hopes to see a conservative governor elected and a "turnover of all these liberals" in the state Legislature.

Jim Davis, was Jock Ewing in 'Dallas' series

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Jim Davis, the gravelly voiced actor who played a lifetime of starring and supporting roles before hitting the jackpot as the tough-as-nails Jock Ewing on the "Dallas" television series, died in his sleep here yesterday, a spokesman for the series said.

Davis, who was in his 70s, died at his Northridge home, where he had been recovering from abdominal surgery. His wife of 36 years, Blanche, was at his side, said Lorimar Productions spokesman Tom Bishop.

Bishop said Davis had been on the job filming "Dallas" until late last month, when he underwent surgery for a perforated ulcer.

"We completed production for the season April 9, so he really only missed one episode," Bishop said. That episode is scheduled for broadcast next Friday.

"Not only have we lost the man who created the character of Jock Ewing, but I've also lost one of my dearest and closest friends," said Leonard Katzman, producer of the CBS series.

Services were scheduled Friday at Encino Community Church in Tarzana.

The 6-foot-3-inch Davis, who appeared in more than 150 films and 300 TV shows, looked as if he was born to play a Texas oil baron. He was known as "The Man" on CBS' "Dallas." In a series filled with characters everyone loves to hate, he was the toughest.

"I think Jock had his day," he said in a 1979 interview, comparing the tough-but-not-as-nasty Ewing father with his son, the villainous J.R. (played by Larry Hagman). He was young, tough, ruthless. I think J.R. may be doing some of the things Jock did when he was younger.

"He's a diamond in the rough who thinks young. He has compassion for people, but on the other hand he can be ruthless if he feels his legs are being chopped off."

Davis also jokingly remarked that whenever he got ready to slip into his Jock Ewing role, he recalled the advice of his wife, Blanche.

"Blanche told me just act like you do at home and you won't have any problems," he said.

Davis was born in Edgerton, Mo., and attended William Jewell College in Liberty, Mo. He spent a year as a tent rigger with a circus before becoming a salesman for an auto company. A promotion brought him to California and he changed careers after first turning down a standard movie contract at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

In 1940, he filmed a screen test with another newcomer, Esther Williams, and signed a $250 a week contract with MGM.

Among Davis' films were "Fabulous Texans," "The Iron Mistress" with Alan Ladd, "Gallant Bess," "Last Command," "Winter Meeting" with Bette Davis, and "Eldorado" and "Rio Lobo" with John Wayne.

He also appeared in the TV series "Stories of the Century," "Rescue 8" and "The Cowboys."

But it was on No. 1-rated "Dallas," which after only three seasons has become one of the most popular TV series of all times, that Davis finally emerged as a name rather than a vaguely familiar face to millions of fans.

She quit the Welk show in 1959, saying "I just couldn't take it any longer. It isn't the same happy family it used to be when I joined him six years ago. Lawrence is hard to work for now. He lacks consideration and there are no exceptions in his book."

Planners continue hearing on Highlands condominium

HIGHLANDS — The Planning Board is expected to continue hearings on a proposed 49-unit condominium complex on the site of the Highlands Marina on Bay Avenue between Sea Drift Avenue and Atlantic Street.

The proposal, presented at Thursday night's board meeting by experts for Marketing Inc., a four-member corporation which bought the marina last year for an estimated $700,000, calls for "townhouse type" condominiums situated side-by-side on the four-acre site.

"We have developed the units as energy and solar efficiency units," according to testimony by Frank C. Hawk of Hawk Co. Inc., Atlantic Highlands, Marketing's architect.

Called the "Chateaux Marina," the complex also will include a total of 129 parking spaces — two for each unit, 16 at the bulkhead near a swimming pool for the unit owners, and 15 more spread throughout the complex.

The entrance to the complex will be on the Sea Drift side of Bay, and will lead to a 24-foot-wide two-way driveway which will parallel Sea Drift for the length of the complex. In addition, the experts said they are considering making an emergency exit from the complex at Sea Drift and Recreation Place.

Marketing officials also would like to convert the current 90-slip marina into a 50-slip marina primarily for the unit owners.

Trees will line both sides of the complex, Hawk said, while lighting will be provided by eight-foot street lights near the units and 10-foot-street lights on the complex's driveway.

Marketing officials say they would like to construct the project in two phases, with 22 units completed first and then the other 27 units. The officials say state approval under the Coastal Area Facilities Review Act, which is mandated for the second phase, will be months away.

Experts also testified that the project will have no adverse effect on the water and sewage treatment in the borough or the automobile traffic on Bay Avenue, but board members and 10 neighborhood residents in attendance questioned the experts on those points.

"I'm very interested in finding out what effect this will have on the water and sewage treatment for the rest of the residents in Highlands," board member Thomas Murphy said. The borough's problems with overflows at its sewerage treatment plant led to a state fine and then a building moratorium here which is due to run out next month.

"Will our old lines be able to handle all this additional flow?" said Harold Heffernan of Atlantic Street, echoing Murphy's inquiry. "That is a good question."

In addition, Heffernan commented that "there is traffic on Bay Avenue without (the need for) any additional traffic."

It could be months before all the various aspects of the complex are hammered out, and board members will be holding further hearings.

Board Chairman Donald Manrodt said he could not estimate when the hearings will be completed.

Marketing needs site plan approval for the project, and also needs a variance because a few of the townhouse buildings are longer than allowed under borough ordinances.

State colleges hope to avert strike

NEW BRUNSWICK (AP) — A negotiating session is set for tomorrow between the state and the union representing 3,200 teachers and employees at New Jersey's eight state colleges, but officials indicate a strike isn't likely until after students finish the semester.

This week's bargaining session is scheduled at the Labor Center, here, but the two sides are far apart and a settlement isn't expected soon.

Talks with the state are still at an impasse, but it appears unlikely that state college faculty members will stage a walkout before the term ends next month for 80,000 students.

Members of the Council of State College Locals decided Friday night to join forces with other public employee unions whose contracts expire this summer.

"Our people are ready to walk out now," said Ron Filante, president of the Ramapo College local and an assistant professor of economics. "But we are exploring coordinating bargaining efforts."

The other public employee unions involved in preliminary talks with the council are the American Association of University Professors, the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees, the Communications Workers of America and the International Federation of Professional and Technical Engineers.

"We understand that Gov. (Brendan) Byrne has set aside an $80 million bundle for wage increases. If everyone is going to get anywhere near a fair share, that will disappear soon," Filante said Saturday night.

"We think he's trying to pit one union against another, encouraging them to settle quickly before the money runs out," he said.

The Council of State College Locals, a member of the American Federation of Teachers, AFL-CIO, has been meeting with the state since October in efforts to work out a two-year contract.

William faces more cross examination

NEW YORK (AP) — Sen. Harrison A. Williams Jr., D-N.J., faced more cross examination today as his Abscam bribery-conspiracy trial entered its fifth week.

Lawyers for both sides indicated over the weekend that testimony could conclude today following a day-long grilling of the 22-year Senate veteran by federal prosecutor Thomas Puccio.

Puccio, whose courtroom work has led to the conviction of four Abscam congressmen, had started his questioning of the senator late Friday, Williams' third day on the witness.

The senator had followed his co-defendant, Cherry Hill, N.J., lawyer Alexander Feinberg, to the stand. The two are accused in connection with the senator's alleged agreement to accept a concealed, free 18 percent share in a Virginia titanium mine in return for his assuring a favor seeking "Arab sheik" loaning the venture $100 million to help him get the gain military contracts.

During his testimony last week, Williams insisted he met with the undercover FBI agent posing as the sheik simply to help his friends get the loan. He contended the discussions were "meaningless" and "baloney sessions" designed to impress the "sheik" how important he was, not how he could peddle his influence.

But Puccio insinuated through his questioning that he found that hard to believe. "Do you mean that as a U.S. senator you sat there and said things that added up to nothing?" the prosecutor asked.

"I did," Williams replied. At another point during Friday's questioning, Puccio asked the senator to explain what he meant when he assured "Sheik Yassir Habib," actually Agent Richard Farhart, that there'd be "no problem" getting the contracts.

"I didn't have that in mind," Williams answered. "What did you have in mind?" Puccio asked, adding emphasis to the word "did."

"To impress the sheik," Williams said. "With what?" Puccio continued. "The baloney. This was the baloney session," the senator replied.

Atlanta adds another name

ATLANTA (AP) — The disappearance of a 21-year-old black man is being investigated informally by a special task force seeking solutions to the slayings of 25 young blacks even though the man's name has not been added to the official task force list, authorities say.

Public Safety Commissioner Lee Brown reviewed the case of Jimmy Ray Payne yesterday and decided not to turn it over immediately to the task force, which also is investigating the disappearance last September of 10-year-old Darron Glass.

But police spokesman Roger Harris said yesterday the task force and investigators from the police missing persons unit are working "hand-in-hand" informally on Payne's case.

Payne was last seen Wednesday morning when he left his southwest Atlanta home to sell old coins at the Omni, a downtown hotel complex where Patrick Baltazar, 11, one of the 25 victims on the task force list, was last seen in February.

Only three of the 26 task force cases involve adults, and Payne, like those three, is small in stature, standing 5-foot-3 and weighing 130 pounds. Unlike those three, however, Payne has not been described as mentally retarded or "slow."

In other developments yesterday, FBI Director William Webster said he didn't authorize comments earlier this month by FBI Agent Mike Twibell, who told a Macon civic club that parents were responsible for some of the slayings.

"I don't think those kind of statements help in a situation where a city is in turmoil," Webster said on NBC's "Meet the Press."

Asked if a compulsive killer was involved, the FBI director, noting that at least four and perhaps five slayings have occurred in the past two months, said, "You can draw that inference if you wish."

Also yesterday, the attorney for a man police want to question in connection with the slayings said her client has "information which could be helpful" to the investigation.

But Sharmen Merdè, attorney for Larry Marshall, said he won't talk to the task force unless he is granted immunity from prosecution for unrelated alleged offenses.

Marshall was extradited last month from Connecticut to face an attempted robbery charge in Fulton County. Brown has said Marshall is not a suspect in the slayings and is wanted for questioning only because of reports he knew one of the victims, Timothy Hill.

MiG shot down

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — A Syrian MiG-25 crashed into a mountainside in a dogfight with Israeli planes raiding Palestinian guerrilla positions in southern Lebanon, witnesses said. The crash came after Syria used its air force for the first time to strafe Christian targets in eastern Lebanon.

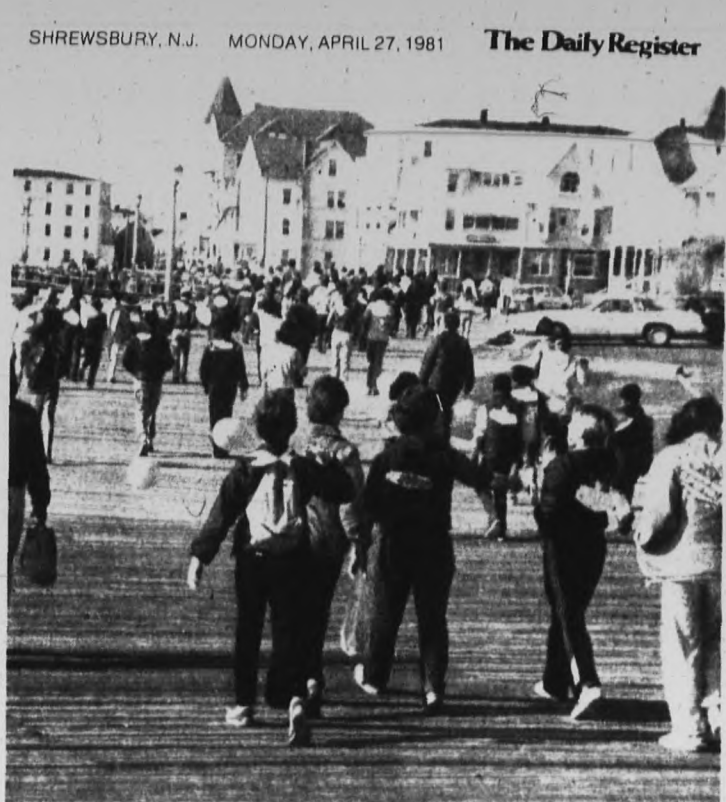

Damascus Radio claimed Syrian interceptors shot down two Israeli jets in the clash Sunday and said one Syrian plane was hit. The radio did not say what happened to the Syrian plane, but Associated Press correspondent Nabih Basho saw the wreckage of the Soviet-built jet on slopes of Mount Chouf, 19 miles east of the port city of Sidon.

Sources in Damascus said the wreckage of the Syrian jet showed no signs of having been shot down. There was speculation it may have crashed because of technical problems or may have been run into the mountain by Israeli fighters.

Israel denied shooting down any Syrian aircraft and said all its planes returned safely.

Lebanese police reported dozens of dead and wounded in the Israeli air raids. The Christians' Voice of Lebanon radio said there were five dead and 20 wounded.

Hunger-striker near death as IRA clashes with cops

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — Supporters of IRA hunger striker Bobby Sands rioted in Belfast, clashed with police in London and appealed to Irish Prime Minister Charles Haughey to intervene on behalf of the 27-year-old guerrilla.

Today was the 58th day of Sands' prison fast, and his weight was reported to have dropped from 155 pounds to 98. Spokesmen for the Irish Republican Army said he nearly died Saturday night after a heart attack but refused medical help.

Members of his family visited him yesterday at Maze Prison outside Belfast and said he was "extremely weak."

One appeal to Haughey came from the National H-Block Committee, which supports Sands' crusade for political prisoner status for IRA convicts in the H-shaped prison cell blocks. It said it believed the Irish leader could force Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher to agree to the demand of Sands and three other hunger strikers in the Maze by threatening to expel Britain's ambassador to the Irish Republic, Leonard Figg.

Another appeal to Haughey came from Owen Carron, who managed the election campaign that won Sands a seat in the British Parliament on April 9. Haughey called on the prime minister to demand of Mrs. Thatcher that she grant the prisoners' demands.

"Bobby Sands will be dead if Charles Haughey delays any longer," Carron said.

There was no immediate response from Haughey, who was reported under increasing pressure from his own Cabinet to take some personal initiative. He said over the weekend that urgent efforts to solve the crisis should continue.

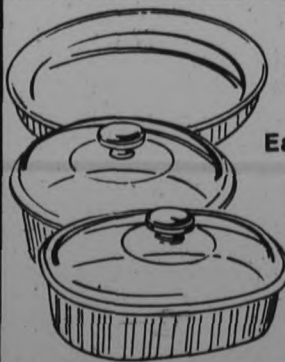

Sands is serving a 14-year term for gun law violations after from a shootout with police. The status of political prisoner would allow him and the others to wear their own clothes instead of prison uniforms, exempt them from prison work and associate freely among themselves within the prison.

It would also constitute recognition by the British government of the IRA as a legitimate political movement instead of the criminal terrorist underground the government claims it is.

'Out of sight, out of mind.'

Necessary to remember

The temptation is to forget the Holocaust, to try to wipe from the mind the painful memory of an event so monstrous, of human tragedy so enormous. The temptation is to flee confrontation with the question that haunts our age: How could a modern nation shed centuries of civilization and systematically, insanely — and almost successfully — undertake the extermination of an entire people?

But if the planned Nazi genocide of East European Jewry, in which six million Jews were murdered while the world watched silently, is painful to remember, it is perilous for us to forget. The annihilation of the Jews and the murder of millions of other victims by the Nazis may be the most horrifying act of genocide in history, but it was not the first, and unless we learn and mark its lessons well, it might not be the last. Bigotry, brutality, inhumanity, denial of human rights — all stalk our world today. And in the United States we are seeing the resurgence of anti-Semitism.

This week has been designated National Days of Remembrance of the Victims of the Holocaust, a time in which to recall the victims of that genocide and, in striving to understand that terrible event, to learn how we can prevent it happening again, to any people. That theme is the focus of a series of programs being offered at Brookdale Community College as part of the National Days of Remembrance observance.

Today at 5 and 7 p.m., the film, "The Pawnbroker," which deals with the impact of wartime experiences on a Holocaust survivor's later life, will be shown at the college, and on Thursday at 8 p.m., Dr. Franklin Littell, a Methodist clergyman and professor of religion at Temple University, will speak on Christian response to the Holocaust. Both those programs, sponsored by Brookdale's Student Services Board, are open to the public without charge.

A series on anti-Semitism sponsored by Brookdale's Center for Holocaust Studies concludes Wednesday. A program on Holocaust survivors and a conference for teachers and high school students is scheduled for next week.

The words of George Santayana ring with renewed urgency: "Those who cannot remember the past are condemned to repeat it." We hope as many as possible will participate in the Brookdale programs these National Days of Remembrance.

Hope in Salvador arrests

A hopeful sign in El Salvador has come with the arrests of two rightists as suspects in the January murders of the head of that country's land-reform program and two of his American advisers.

Up to now El Salvador's friends have been embarrassed by the fact that few if any rightists had been arrested as suspects in the continuing bloodbath (10,000 killed last year alone) that has been the story in recent years. That has held true even though neutral observers felt the army, the police and rightist groups protected by the government were responsible for a high share of the killings in a country where leftist guerrillas are also the culprits.

The Reagan administration, under fire for unequivocally backing the government junta, has been pressing it to control the violence from its side and to find the January killers as well as those involved in the December slaying of four American women missionary workers. The recent arrests — one in San Salvador and the other in Miami — are the first fruits of this effort. (Miami is home to many wealthy Salvadoran exiles who in their desire to wreck land reform back in the homeland underwrite the "death squads" which have been so virulent.)

Now come a test for the criminal justice system in El Salvador. But at least the government, so deserving of criticism in the past, on this occasion merits commendation and a prayer for more of the same.

Feisty fella

With an estimated 10,000 well-wishers shouting encouragement — "Go, Physty, go! You can do it!" — a 25-foot, 25,000-pound baby sperm whale has been herded back to the open sea.

The young whale, whose nickname derives from the Latin name for his species — Physeter catodon — was suffering from pneumonia when it beached itself 10 days ago. Biologists from the National Marine Fisheries Service and the Okeanos Foundation nursed Physty to a remarkable recovery, and his valiant fight for life captured human hearts.

We're glad you made it, Physty. Whale and farewell.

Secrets behind Saudi arms sale

By JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON — Washington has its own version of Mount St. Helens, which periodically belches hot steam into the atmosphere. This is the recurring question of arms aid to Saudi Arabia, America's great oil ally.

President Reagan now wants to sell the Saudis some super-radar planes, plus mid-air refueling capability and bomb racks for their F-15 jet fighters. Opponents of the arms sale fear that the equipment will be used offensively against Israel.

To prevent a major eruption, officials have tried to keep some details out of the public debate. These include: (1) the hair-raising possibility that some Palestinian pilots in the Saudi air force could make unauthorized strikes against Israel in their souped-up F-15s; (2) proposals to approve the sale of even more military equipment to the Saudis, including 10 long-range helicopter gunships, American anti-tank missiles and several ground radar stations; and (3) the

WASHINGTON SCENE

State Department's push to sell five Boeing transport planes to neighboring Iraq.

The Saudis insist they have no intention of using American arms to attack Israel. But as part of the weapons deal, the United States would provide Saudi Arabia with bomb racks and refueling equipment for the F-15s that Jimmy Carter sold to the Saudis in 1978.

This would extend the range and increase the firepower of the F-15s. Coupled with the fact that several pilots in the Saudi air force are Palestinians, the F-15s could pose a serious threat to Israel.

There is also some misunderstanding about AWACS. The radar command planes will not give the Saudis much ground surveillance capability beyond what they already have. But the system would greatly reduce Israel's critical advantage in air warfare.

Pentagon sources told my associate Ron McRae that the Saudis have a genuine need for an early warning system like AWACS. But the Pentagon would prefer not to sell the system to the Saudis and, instead, wants to maintain the present arrangement of American-owned-and-operated aircraft.

The sale of Boeing 747 and 727 transports to Iraq is being promoted as strictly a commercial deal to help Boeing compete with foreign aircraft manufacturers. The contract would be worth about $200 million to Boeing — if it can get congressional approval for the necessary export license.

The sticky point is that Iraq is one of four nations on the State Department's list of terrorist-supporting regimes in the Arab world. The others are Libya, Syria and South Yemen. Sale of military equipment to any of these countries would be hard to justify, especially for an administration that has made terrorism its chief foreign-policy target.

So the Foggy Bottom strategists are trying to stress the peaceful use of the transport planes — though U.S. intelligence analysts have documented a number of instances in recent years in which such transport aircraft have been used to ferry troops in wartime situations — by Libya, Iran and Israel, to name three.

Capitol Hill sources told my associate Lucette Lagnado that the administration apparently is hoping to push the Iraqi deal through quietly, while Congress is occupied with the Saudi arms controversy.

To spike the opposition of Rep. Jonathan Bingham, D-N.Y., whose subcommittee oversees export licensing, the State Department resorted to a little horse trading. The administration agreed to drop a long-pending proposal to let the Iraqi Navy buy American frigate engines, in return for Bingham's silence on the Boeing license. Bingham, who had fought the warship engine sale for months, reportedly agreed to the transport plane transaction as the lesser of two evils.

Meanwhile, the Saudi oil minister, Sheikh Ahmed Yamani, has made it quite clear that the Saudis expect American arms as a quid pro quo for holding down the world price of oil. And fuel prices are obviously an important consideration for the Reagan administration in its fight to curb inflation.

The Fourth Amendment triumphs

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

WASHINGTON — It's a long, long way from the meadow of Runnymede to the insignificant streets of Buford, Ga., but the spirit of Magna Carta was breathing last week in Dixie. The U.S. Supreme Court once again affirmed the doctrine that a man's home is his castle.

The opinion that will be reported as Steagald vs. United States is something less than a landmark. Other Fourth Amendment cases will be invoked more often. Nevertheless, the high court's decision is important; it reminds us that even a bunch of cocaine smugglers have rights that cannot be violated by the cops.

These were the facts: Back in January 1978, agents of the Drug Enforcement Administration received word through a reliable informer that a federal fugitive named Ricky Lyons might be found in the Atlanta area. Agent Kelly Goodwens located the lakeside cottage in Buford where Lyons was thought to be hiding. Goodwens put together a raiding party and descended upon the cottage. The agents swiftly grabbed two men who were just outside on the driveway.

One of the men was Cary Keith Steagald; the other was his partner Hoyt Gaultney. Inside the cottage was Gaultney's wife Cathy. It transpired that all three of them lived there. Several agents went to the door, demanded entrance, and told Cathy Gaultney they had an arrest warrant for the fugitive Lyons. "He isn't here," she told them. They put her at gunpoint against a wall and searched the house.

Sure enough, Lyons wasn't there. He disappears from the story at this point. But something else was there: 43 pounds of top-grade cocaine, concealed in a couple of suitcases. Hoyt Gaultney and Steagald subsequently were tried on drug charges. The record doesn't show what happened to Gaultney, but Steagald got two concurrent five-year sentences. He appealed.

His appeal rested on familiar Fourth Amendment grounds. The DEA agents had no search warrant for the cottage; they had only an arrest warrant for a fugitive who wasn't there. Under the exclusionary rule, Steagald contended, evidence that is seized illegally cannot be legally admitted at trial. Steagald's lawyers demanded that the suitcases, the cocaine and other paraphernalia be excluded. The trial court and the Fifth Circuit refused to buy this argument and thus upheld the conviction. Last week the Supreme Court reversed.

In an opinion by Justice Thurgood Marshall, the court held that the outstanding arrest warrant was not enough. The agents had both the time and the opportunity to seek a formal search warrant for the cottage. So far as the occupants of the cottage were concerned, they were "third parties." They had rights of privacy as precious as the rights of English freemen in the days of King John. The unwarranted search was "unreasonable." If it were otherwise, said Marshall, police could arm themselves with an arrest warrant for a single person and then search all the homes of the individual's friends and acquaintances.

Justice William Rehnquist, dissenting, scoffed at his colleagues' "ivory tower misconception" of the realities of law enforcement. Marshall's "beguilingly simple" formulation, he said, "simply will not wash."

Rehnquist thought the evidence should be admitted and the conviction affirmed.

It is painful to say this, for Rehnquist usually is an expositor of sound law, but this time he was wrong and Marshall was right. Granted, this accused persons in this case were not models of civic virtue. Evidence disclosed that they were engaged in a major smuggling operation, bringing in cocaine from Colombia in the hollowed-out bases of ornamental lamps. The seized drugs had a wholesale value of $2.5 million.

That is immaterial to the larger issue. Seven-and-a-half centuries ago, the doctrine was laid down in Magna Carta that free men have rights that not even the Crown may violate. On balance, it is far more important to preserve such rights than to lock up a dealer in coke.

May we second the fine Daily Register editorial favoring the appointment of Daniel O'Hern to the New Jersey Supreme Court. He is a man of integrity whose qualifications are outstanding. His intelligence, thoughtfulness, consideration and fairness are widely noted and his devotion is for all people. No politician will be able to block this nomination because there are thousands of Monmouth County voters, both Democrat and Republican, who would be outraged.

Daniel O'Hern is a fine lawyer and public servant who possesses those qualities most necessary for the dispensation of justice. If certain Democratic Party leaders now oppose his nomination, they do so for personal power motives and not in the interest of the Democratic Party. Daniel O'Hern's

To the Editor:

I am organizing the women of Monmouth County to fight Sen. Eugene Bedell's cynical use of women to further his own political ambitions. John Florino has made it perfectly clear for more than a year that he was going to block Daniel J. O'Hern's appointment to the Supreme Court for his own petty reasons and now it appears he has Sen. Bedell in his pocket. It is politics as usual — dirty politics. And dirty politics don't have any place in the choice of Supreme Court justices. All of us depend upon these important decisions which the justices are called upon to make.

Senatorial courtesy has never been used before to block the appointment of a member to the highest court — and with good reason. What right does Sen. Bedell have to deprive the state of New Jersey of the finest justice the state Supreme Court has ever had or ever will have? The N.J. Bar Association cleared Dan O'Hern. Dan O'Hern is overwhelmingly qualified personally, by education and by experience to serve the people of the state of New Jersey — women, blacks and even men.

We Democrats don't need a petty man with personal grudges heading our party in Monmouth County and John Florino has shown himself to be just that.

We women, Democrat, Republican or Independent, cannot be used to further political ambitions of men. This disgusting, cynical use of women by Sen. Bedell and John Florino needs to be stopped right now.

Any women interested in the background of this letter, please feel free to contact me.

To the Editor:

May I wholeheartedly agree with the statement in your issue of April 23 by the National Organization of Women (NOW) to the effect that Sen. Bedell's objection to Daniel J. O'Hern for the New Jersey Supreme Court is "hypocritical, degrading, cynical and stupid."

This observation is well put and very true.

It has been my good fortune to work with Daniel O'Hern off and on for 20 years in law and in environmental protection and I can state first hand and without reservation that he is honest, highly intelligent and has an enormous grasp of the law.

The New Jersey Supreme Court couldn't do better.

To the Editor:

Gov. Brendan T. Byrne's decision to nominate Mr. O'Hern to the state Supreme Court is excellent and wise.

Mr. O'Hern is highly intelligent, perceptive, wise and courageous. Civil rights would gain tremendously by his nomination.

As mayor of Red Bank, Mr. O'Hern always took a strong stand on the rights, the welfare of the black community. When there was a wrong, Mr. O'Hern did something about that wrong. He never stuck his head in the sand as too many others do.

To the Editor:

Organizations such as the Right to Life and Coalition of Concerned Parents are usually well organized and well financed. They will continue to speak out and take ads and give information that is not necessarily true, will continue to try and convince politicians and the public that they, and only they, are right. Planned Parenthood's program and financing are public information. Their annual report shows what they do and where the money goes and is needed.

I am proud that the Register has spoken, and it is hoped that there are many who do not want their representatives on any level to be controlled by special interest groups.

Today in history

By The Associated Press
Today is Monday, April 27, the 117th day of 1981. There are 248 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On April 27, 1941, Athens fell to German invaders after 180 days of Greek resistance during World War II.

On this date:
In 1521, Portuguese navigator Ferdinand Magellan was killed by natives in the Philippines.

In 1791, the inventor of the telegraph, Samuel Morse, was born in Charlestown, Mass.

In 1937, the first Social Security payment was made.

In 1945, Allied forces took control of Genoa and Verona in Italy near the end of World War II.

Ten years ago: South Korea's president, Chung Hee Park, won a third term.

Five years ago: The Vatican announced the appointment of 19 new Roman Catholic cardinals, including Archbishop William Baum of Washington, D.C.

One year ago: U.S. Defense Secretary Harold Brown ruled out bartering with Iran for the return of the bodies of eight American servicemen killed in the aborted hostage rescue attempt.

Today's birthday: Former Federal Reserve Board Chairman Arthur Burns is 77 years old.

Thought for today: Ambition is so powerful a passion in the human breast that however high we reach we are never satisfied — Nicolo Machiavelli, Italian political philosopher (1469-1527).

Auto rental firms changing policies

By SYLVIA PORTER

For the first time in more than a half-century, the pricing practices of major auto rental companies are about to be drastically changed — so that you and I will be charged only for the time we keep the unit, for any fuel we use and for a "drop-off" fee if we leave the car in a city different from the one in which we rented it.

Effective this coming Friday, May 1, Hertz, biggest company in the field, will cancel mileage fees entirely. It is merely logical to expect Avis and National to follow quickly if the experimental elimination of the traditional time-plus-mileage rates is a success.

Gone will be the numerical nightmare of trying to calculate mileage, time car is in use, wildly-fluctuating gasoline prices. While the smaller auto rental companies may shift in the opposite direction (to pricing with lower time rates plus mileage), a new era in this ever-more-complex $3 billion a year business is under way.

Will you be helped or hurt financially by the "flat" (no mileage) rates? That depends on the distance you drive, where you travel and when. Here are your guidelines for savings on car rentals:

(1) The least expensive deal almost always is the longer-term book-in-advance, unlimited mileage "touring" specials which require you to bring the car back to where you picked it up. On a week-long touring special, the daily rate comes to less than half the normal one-day charge.

(2) Pick the smallest car feasible for your needs. Subcompact rentals at most outfits are 30-40 percent under charges for big cars and your fuel also will be about one-quarter less. These savings ratios apply whether you use the flat-rate touring specials or the traditional time-and-mileage (T&M) charges.

What, though, if yours is an unplanned business or pleasure trip that doesn't qualify for the low touring fares — a short, mid-week journey or drive from one city to another? Flat or T&M rates?

The answer depends on the "mileage breakeven point" for the different rates. Say your flat, unlimited mileage rate is $39 a day while your traditional T&M charges are $30 a day plus 30 cents a mile. The difference is $9, so divide that by 30 cents. Your breakeven distance is 30 miles a day. If you're driving over that, pick the flat rate; less, take the traditional T&M charge.

YOUR MONEY'S WORTH

For instance, say you must fly from Chicago to New York for a Monday business meeting. You plan to call on a client in Connecticut Tuesday, drive on to Boston for a Wednesday seminar, drop the car there, fly home to Chicago that evening. Car use: three days. Driving distance: 240 miles. Drop-off charge: $25 (it could be as high as $300 for New York to Los Angeles). Punch out your calculator totals.

The three days times the $9 daily difference is $27, plus the $25 drop-off cost totals $52. Divided by 30 cents is 173 miles. So the flat rate is cheaper. Figuring gas at $1.50 a gallon and 20 miles per gallon in a subcompact, your actual flat rate cost would be $160 ($39 times 3, or $117; plus $18 for fuel; and the $25 drop-off charge). Your T&M rate would have been $180 ($30 times 3 days, or $90; plus 30 cents times 240 miles, or $72; plus the same $18 for fuel; no drop-off fee).

(3) Check the car rental company's refueling charge per gallon in the city where you're returning the car. If you see gas cheaper along your route, stop and fill up there.

(4) Investigate rates in different cities if you're driving from one to another. If there's little or no difference in air fares, fly to the one with lower rental rates. Rates at Kennedy or LaGuardia airports can be as much as $5 a day under Newark, N.J.

(5) Inquire about car size, too. At Chicago's O'Hare, prices go from $34 a day for a subcompact to $55 for a full-size car. But in Milwaukee, the range is just $37 to $50.

The biggest bargain is a $119-a-week subcompact touring rate, says Hertz. You could take a three-week 6,000 mile coast-to-coast junket for just $357, less than six cents a mile. But gas could be an extra $450. That should keep you closer to home and keep car renting profitable. Also three of you in a subcompact for three weeks? Ugh!

Today's products — better or worse

EDITOR'S NOTE: "They just don't make things the way they used to." It's a familiar complaint, but is it true? Here, in the first of a three-part series, is a look at quality — American style.

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

Modern technology has broken down. Newer doesn't always mean better. To many people, it means worse.

Half of the people questioned by the American Society for Quality Control in a survey of 7,000 households late last year said the quality of American products had declined over the past five years.

The society, which is made up of people who work in the field of quality control, said one-fourth of the public thought quality had improved and one-fourth thought it had stayed the same.

A little more than 27 percent of the people questioned said foreign-made products are better than domestic ones; just under 24 percent said U.S. products are better. The rest said imports and domestic goods are equal.

There is no single, objective standard by which to judge the thousands of consumer products on the market. Quality frequently is in the eye of the customer.

People in business, in government and in the consumer movement generally agree that the basic quality of big-ticket items — cars, major household appliances and television sets, for example, — is better than ever, whether the public believes it or not.

There is less of a consensus about things like small appliances, clothing and the gadgets of everyday life in the 1980s.

"It's mixed," said Ralph Nader, when asked about quality. "Some products are not made the way they used to be," said the long-time industry critic. Small appliances seem to break more quickly. "Clothes," Nader said, "are falling apart."

Does the public care?

Monte Florman, director of the technical department for Consumers Union, the non-profit testing organization, said he believes that many of today's products break more quickly. The small appliance industry, Florman said, "has gone the direction of proliferation and throwaway ... But people don't seem to mind it."

Statistical measurements of quality can be tricky. The average age of the automobile on the road today, for example, is increasing. It was 5.5 years in 1969 and 6.4 years in 1979, according to the Motor Vehicle Manufacturers Association. Does that mean cars are lasting longer? Or does it mean that people are driving them longer because they cannot afford new ones?

The number of complaints to the Better Business Bureau is rising. The bureau handled just over one million complaints — a record — in 1979, the latest year for which complete figures are available. But most of those complaints dealt with services rather than with products. And no one knows whether the increase in reflects an actual decline in quality. "People are much more likely to complain today," noted Nader.

Jay W. Leek, president of the 37,000-member Society for Quality Control, said things are not as bad as they seem. "Personally, I do not believe products are any worse today," he said. "In fact, I believe they're better."

Leek said, however, that there was a trend in the 1960s and 1970s toward "planned failure." Manufacturers kept changing products in an effort to get people to buy new models. Today, that policy won't work, Leek said. "Planned obsolescence is obsolete in the 1980s."

It is hard to assess quality. There are several reasons:

— Modern technology is complicated. Repairing a television set is much more involved than replacing a tube or two. You can't simply take a screwdriver, tinker under the hood and fix your car yourself. Power steering and air conditioning didn't used to break down because there was no power steering or air conditioning. Automobiles, said Nader, are safer. "The problem is they're Q — My husband is 59 and presently has $8,000 in a savings and loan IRA. I am 58 and have $4,000 in a spousal IRA at the same place. We will soon be adding to our fund, but we wonder if we could earn better interest elsewhere. We have no other pension and are concerned about inflation. Is it possible to transfer IRA accounts? A — S&L certificates earn good income, but you would be better off with a growth investment to protect against inflation. I would suggest a mutual fund. Acorn Fund (120 La Salle Street, Chicago, Ill. 60603) and Evergreen Fund (550 Mamaroneck Avenue,

Popular U.S. songs highlighted in show

By MARY CAMPBELL

NEW YORK (AP) — "Songs are important touchstones in most people's lives," says composer Henry Mancini. "There are songs that, every time you hear them, the computer in your head just triggers a previous part of your life."

Jack Elliott, producer of tonight's two-hour "Live from Studio 8H: 100 Years of America's Popular Music" on NBC, says he believes the popular song "is the single most important contribution America ever made to the world in history."

Whether one takes the personal approach, like Mancini, or the cosmic, like Elliott, tonight's show would seem to include both. There will be singing, the 86-piece New American Orchestra from Los Angeles, and talk about songwriters and what was going on historically at the time certain songs were written.

Mancini will narrate. "I've got 40 pages of dialogue," he exclaims. "I think they forgot I'm a melody man, not a word man. But it always pleases me to talk about other musicians."

One song that takes Mancini's mind back through time is "Music, Maestro, Please." He says, "I was too young to be romantic about it; it had nothing to do with me. Tonight I mustn't think of her. Music, maestro, please. I just knew that's what it must be when I grew up. It said something."

The TV show divides the last century of music into four time sections, 1880 to World War I, the Armistice to the Crash, the Depression to the end of World War II, and 1946 to the present.

Mancini's own favorite periods of song, he says, are "the golden age of Tin Pan Alley, the late 1930s and 1940s, and turn-of-the-century band music, like Sousa marches, being lost now, I think."

"I started to play music when I was a kid — flute in the Sons of Italy Band and the high school band in my little town of Aliquippa, Pennsylvania," he says. "We played marches and overtures. I got a taste of the repertoire of the period. There are 35,000 school bands in this country, but I think now they're mostly geared to contemporary music."

The only Mancini song to be performed on the NBC show will be "Moon River," which he wrote for the 1961 movie "Breakfast at Tiffany's." He says, "They asked me who I wanted for a lyricist and I thought I'd shoot for the best. I said Johnny Mercer." Mercer also wrote the lyrics for Mancini's title song for "Days of Wine and Roses." Both songs won Oscars.

Mancini has the original demonstration record he and Mercer made, singing together, of "Moon River." "Johnny had a great feeling for singing a song," he says, "not unlike Louis Armstrong's. But I'm not a singer. There's a certain charm some writers have demonstrating their own material but I think most of us should leave it in the producer's office rather than perform it on the stage."

Sponsor for "100 Years of America's Popular Music" is Armstrong Industries, Inc., which calls the show a return to TV of its "Armstrong Circle Theater." Singers on the program include Sarah Vaughan, who starts with "The Bully," "After the Ball Is Over" and "Alexander's Ragtime Band." George Burns, Steve Lawrence and Eydie Gorme; and Gregory Hines, who sang "I'm Just a Lucky So and So," one of his numbers in Broadway's "Sophisticated Ladies," at a preperformance party.

Brookdale dancers show budding talent

By BILL ZAPCIC

MIDDLETOWN — Several excellent pieces — including a work in progress — highlighted "Dance X Three," the student dance recital held at Brookdale Community College, Lincroft, this past weekend.

But while many pieces showed technical excellence, and others an insight into the nature of dance, only one — "Lifeline," the work in progress by Nancy Waldman and the "Spoke The Hub Dancing Company" performed by Brookdale students — showed an innate cohesiveness which could shine beyond the trappings of kicks, turns and gyrations.

"Lifeline," which will be performed at Prospect Park in Brooklyn, N.Y., on Saturday and across the Brooklyn Bridge Sunday, is a linear work obviously not intended for the proscenium stage. (The choreographer later confirmed this.) In it, the dancers act out the stages of life in such a clear manner that, unlike in many other representational pieces, the meaning leaps out. There is no time lag for recognition here.

The prospects for this piece are bright — no pun intended — for its park and bridge performances.

The "Dance X Three" opener, "Broadway," choreographed by Lori De Shaw and performed by a large cast led by a "boss dancer" who acted as much as traffic cop as anything else, was a celebration both of standard Broadway dance and of the human body.

While "Broadway" and other pieces banked heavily on pelvic and buttocks bumps, the pieces also amply demonstrated the discipline and muscular control needed for success in dancing shoes.

"Broadway" and "Another One Bites The Dust," danced and choreographed by

Dance

Karen Matarazzo, moved with the lyrics as well as the music. Even though stage crosses seemed to fill time and space inordinately, it was obvious that many of the dancers are novices reaching for excellence.

A highly representational, dreamlike dance piece titled "Innuendos" was choreographed by Dorothy Toland Pons and danced by some of the obviously more advanced members of the stage cast. Dramatically lighted by Charles Miller, "Innuendos" was a fascinating, riveting dance which involved gymnastics, balance, muscle control and a phenomenal intensity.

Elements of Eastern culture permeated its substance.

But "Innuendos," for all its dazzle, was a tad confusing as there were four distinct focal points, all of which changed as dancers shifted main groups. Four areas vying for one limited attention.

The second act's "Beatles Concerto," a De Shaw piece, blended diverse ballet and modern dance elements into a cohesive whole. The program notes termed the piece "Not a medley of tunes by Lennon, McCartney or Harrison but a true composition in classical form;" the dance lived up to its billing.

Janie Mauney as the spirit, and the beautiful, lanky women among the "Waltzing Dreams" caught the flow best, perhaps, although the sprightly sassies in the "Maxwell's Silver Hammer" segment were fun.

The Toland Pons-choreographed "Holding Patterns" allowed a diverse group to work together; it showed effort in design and performance.

NFL draft turns vets into complainers

Gary Jeter

NEW YORK (AP) — The National Football League draft is famous for turning college kids into millionaires. But it's beginning to turn veterans into complainers, too, as they see untested rookies sign for sometimes awesome amounts.

A year ago, after Los Angeles signed its No.1 draft choice, safety Johnnie Johnson, to a six-year, $1.1-million contract, four Rams — Jack and Jim Youngblood, Dennis Harrah and Larry Brooks — demanded that their contracts be renegotiated. The Rams refused, and the four Pro Bowl players boycotted training camp.

They returned a few days before the season began, fined $200 a day apiece from July 26 to Sept. 2 — reportedly with assurances they would receive additional pay at a future date. They got it after the season.

Now, from some unidentified New York Giants players, come threats of a walkout if the team, as expected, drafts North Carolina linebacker Lawrence Taylor with its top pick (No.2 overall in the first round Tuesday) and signs him to the three-year, $750,000 contract he is said to be seeking.

The highest paid Giants reportedly are Gary Jeter ($145,000 a year), Brad Van Pelt ($130,000) and last year's No.1 choice, Mark Haynes ($125,000).

Said one Giant: "We've talked about walking out. There's no way a rookie deserves to make more than some of us."

Van Pelt said he wasn't part of the walkout talk "but I know about it. It's a weird situation ... To know that I played eight years in five straight Pro Bowls (all-star games) and to have a player who hasn't played one down making so much more than myself — I'll deal with that when it happens."

With kickoff time to the draft fast approaching — 10 a.m. EDT tomorrow in a ballroom at the New York Hilton Hotel — telephone lines across the country are no doubt humming as trade-conscious coaches and general managers toss around names and numbers, trying to improve their placing in the selection process or offering prime pick positions for quality players or even more future choices.

Oakland did just that last year when it dealt tight end Dave Casper to Houston in exchange for the Oilers' first and second-round picks this year and their second-round selection next year. The Raiders are the only team with two first-round choices this year — the 21st and 28th in the round.

Some of the later-round choices are payoffs for deals made long ago. Los Angeles, for example, has the No.66 pick — seventh in the third round — because it dealt its seventh-round and ninth-round picks in the 1977 draft to Washington.

Conversely, San Diego has additional fourth-round picks this year and in 1983 because of the trade last August which sent linebacker Don Goode to the Cleveland Browns.

The New Orleans Saints, 1-15 last year, have the No.1 selection and, unless they get a deal too tempting to pass up, are expected to select George Rogers, the running back from South Carolina and winner of the Heisman Trophy as last season's best college player.

Bum Phillips built the Oilers into an NFL power by making Earl Campbell their No.1 draft in 1978. He was fired as the Oilers' coach and general manager last New Year's Eve after the team was knocked out of the playoffs in the first round by Oakland.

Now, as New Orleans' coach, he figures to try and rebuild the Saints the same way, with a running back in the Campbell mold.

The Giants, with the No.2 pick, are followed by the New York Jets, who are likely to select running back Freeman McNeil of UCLA.

Sixers, Rockets game away from meeting in NBA finale

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The Philadelphia 76ers played a "doubleheader" yesterday in beating the Boston Celtics 107-105 to take a 3-1 lead in their National Basketball Association best-of-seven Eastern Conference final.

The 76ers won the first "game" by leading 65-48 at halftime. They lost the second "game" when the Celtics outscored them 57-42 in the second half and came within a stolen pass of tying just before the final horn.

With Philadelphia leading 107-105, Boston's Tiny Archibald tossed a long pass toward Larry Bird in the corner, but it was intercepted by Philadelphia's Bobby Jones, who held on for the final two seconds.

Boston actually outshot the 76ers from the field, 46-39, but Philadelphia made 29 of 39 at the foul line while the Celtics were 13 for 19.

Jones said of his steal, "I decided to head for Bird. I really didn't see the ball until just before I caught it. I figured he (Bird) would drift to the side while his teammates converged on the basket."

Philadelphia Coach Billy Cunningham said he was perplexed.

"You go in at halftime and tell them how well they played in the first half, go over and tell them what they have to do to maintain it, and then we almost blow it," Cunningham said.

Boston Coach Bill Fitch said his team lost the game in the first half with "miserable, horrible play. We were one pass behind the play. We'll win Wednesday's game in Boston. We want to come back here, to this house of jinxes," referring to the fact that Boston is 0-5 in Philadelphia this season.

Julius Erving, who led Philadelphia with 20, scored the final six points.

The fifth game in the series between the rivals, who tied for their division title during the regular season, will be played Wednesday night in Boston. If a sixth game is necessary, the teams will return to Philadelphia Friday.

Rockets 100, Kings 89

HOUSTON — Houston Rockets Coach Del Harris told his team to play the Kansas City Kings as if they were in the final game of the NBA Western Conference finals with only 48 minutes separating them from elimination.

The result was a stunning performance by center Moses Malone, who scored 42 points and grabbed 23 rebounds as the Rockets decked the Kings.

Now, Kings Coach Cotton Fitzsimmons will make the same speech Wednesday night in Kansas City, but he'll be telling the truth — the Kings have only 48 minutes to avoid elimination from the playoffs.

Houston has a 3-1 lead and is one victory away from a spot in the National Basketball Association championship finals against either Philadelphia or Boston.

"Before the game, Del went to the board and wrote 'pretend this is game seven,'" Reid said. "He said we always play better in the last game."

He told us to forget our lead and think it was 3-3 with 48 minutes left."

The Kings have had difficulty picking which Rocket is the decoy and which one is armed with live ammunition.

The Rockets decoyed Malone last Friday night, so Calvin Murphy and Robert Reid blasted away for a combined 43 points and a 92-88 victory. But Malone came out firing Sunday.

"I just want to win this series, I don't care how many points I get myself," Malone said. "I got 42 Friday night and we still won and it's not different when I get 42."

"I really think it's great that the two Cinderella teams that nobody thought would make it this far, are battling it out for the Western Conference championship."

NO GO — Center Moses Malone of the Houston Rockets attempts to get a hook shot over the outstretched hand of Kansas City King Sam Lacey in the first period of their NBA playoff game yesterday. Malone went on to power the Rockets to a 100-89 victory.

Mets, Yankees lose

MONTREAL (AP) — Jerry Manuel hit his first major league home run, a three-run blast in the seventh inning, to lead the Montreal Expos to a 7-6 decision over the New York Mets and a sweep of yesterday's doubleheader.

The Expos won the opener 8-4 as Ellis Valentine and Gary Carter cracked two-run homers and Ray Burris fired a six-hitter. It was the second triumph in three decisions for Burris, both of them coming against the Mets, his former teammates.

The Expos, who are undefeated in eight games at Olympic Stadium this season, led 3-2 in the nightcap before Bobby Ramos led off the seventh with a single against reliever Jeff Reardon. One out later, Tim Lincecum drew a walk and Manuel, subbing for injured second baseman Rodney Scott, out with a sore thumb, deposited a 2-1 pitch over the fence in left-center field.

The Expos scored their eventual winning run in the eighth on doubles by Chris Speier and Bobby Ramos.

Blue Jays 2, Yankees 1

NEW YORK — Dave Stieb pitched a seven-hitter and consecutive doubles by Ernie Whitt and Lloyd Moseby sparked a two-run third inning that gave him his first runs of the season as the Toronto Blue Jays edged the New York Yankees.

Stieb, 1-3, had pitched 23 consecutive innings without getting a run from the Blue Jays before the doubles by Whitt and Moseby off Tom Underwood, 0-2. Damaso Garcia's bunt single sent Moseby to third and, two outs later, he scored on the front end of a double steal.

Stieb, who gave up an eighth-inning run on Jerry Mumphrey's single and Dave Winfield's double, struck out three and walked two in his first complete game this year.

The Yankees have failed to score for Underwood in his two starts this year, covering 132-3 innings.

FIERY FLAME — Goalie Pat Riggin of the Calgary Flames lets out a yell for joy in celebration of the Flames 4-1 victory over the Philadelphia Flyers yesterday. The win moved the Flames into the semifinals of the NHL playoffs versus the Minnesota North Stars.

Flames burn Flyers

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The Calgary Flames took advantage of Flyers' penalties for power play goals by Willi Plett, Ken Houston and Kevin Lavalley last night for a 4-1 National Hockey League playoff triumph over the Philadelphia Flyers that boosted the Flames into the Stanley Cup semifinals for the first time ever.

The Flames, who had never won a playoff series before this year, when they played in Atlanta, captured the best-of-seven quarter-final matchup with Philadelphia 4-3, winning here twice. Calgary hosts Minnesota tomorrow night in the first game of the semifinals.

Philadelphia, which lost in the finals to the New York Islanders last year, skated shorthanded for much of the opening period. Just 1:26 into the game, the Flyers were caught with too many men on the ice and Plett capitalized, neatly deflecting a shot by Guy Chouinard through his own legs and past Philadelphia goaltender Rick St. Croix at 3:03.

Houston made it 2-0 8 1/4 minutes later, capping a two-on-one break by tipping Chouinard's pass behind St. Croix with Philadelphia's Paul Holmgren penalized.

At 13:00 of the second period, Lavalley, a rookie appearing in only his second playoff contest, took a pass from Paul Reinhart and sent a wrist shot over St. Croix's shoulder from the right side of the net. Philadelphia's Glen Cochran was in the penalty box.

The Flyers came alive briefly in the second period: Bill Barber settled his 11th goal of the post season — and 100th playoff point of his career — with a 35-foot slapshot directly off a faceoff won by Philadelphia's Tim Kerr.

But Flames' goalie Pat Riggin, who tended the net in all four Calgary victories in this series, stood firm. Riggin made three crucial saves on blazing drives by Reg Leach as the Flyers pressed their attack after Barber's goal.

But Kent Nilsson and Bob MacMillan combined to finish off the Flyers at 6:09 of the third period.

Shore's Kampf knew how Van Dyke felt

WEST LONG BRANCH — Like coach, like player.

When Shore Regional High School pitcher Mark Van Dyke threw a no-hitter Saturday against Matawan Regional and lost, that was incredible. But when he found out later that the same thing had happened to Coach Fred Kampf while he was a Blue Devil hurler back in the mid '60's, well, that really was incredible.

It happened during the 1965 season, when Kampf was the ace of a very successful Shore staff. In fact, Kampf was something of a phenom back then. In his three years on the varsity, Kampf threw over 200 innings, struck out over 400 batters, and pitched five no-hitters, three in that sensational '65 season.

One of those five stands out in Kampf's mind.

"It was the first game of the season,"

DAN ROSENBAUM

Kampf remembered, "and, we played it in cold, snowy weather. Our third baseman made three consecutive errors and we lost the game to Raritan, 2-1. After the game, I told Mark about it."

Mark couldn't have been a very good listener at that point. He was pretty upset, and understandably so, seeing as how it was his first no-hitter and all. And it wasn't so much losing the game, but the way he lost it.

After six innings of scoreless ball, Matawan came up in the top of the seventh and got the first man on when second baseman Ray Manzo couldn't handle a popup behind the bag. Van Dyke walked the next batter to put men on first and second.

"As soon as he got on," Van Dyke explained, "I knew I had to knuckle down."

The Huskie runners were sacrificed over to second and third, and that brought Ken Lerner to the plate. Lerner took the first two pitches, and Van Dyke began his windup for the third pitch. Bob Bongiorno, the runner on third, broke for the plate.

"There was a lot of screaming going on, and our bench was going crazy," Van Dyke said. "After the game, I was told that my teammates were trying to let me know that the suicide was on, but I just couldn't hear them. If I had, I would have thrown the ball outside and we would have gotten the runner."

As it was, Lerner laid down a beautiful bunt. Bongiorno scored easily, and that made Van Dyke uneasy.

"After the top of the inning was over, I went back to the bench and put my head between my hands. I was more or less in a daze, but I snapped out of it when we got things going."

The Blue Devils loaded the bases with one out, and up stepped Mr. Manzo. Kampf gave the signal for the suicide squeeze, and all the players on the bench saw it. But as sure as they were of the play, many of them were equally sure that Manzo didn't.

"A couple of guys on the end of the bench kind of thought that he (Manzo) hadn't picked up the sign," Van Dyke noted. "They started shouting at the guy on third (J.P. Marks) not to go, but I guess he didn't hear them."

Manzo let the pitch go, and Marks was a dead duck at the plate. And when Manzo struck out on the next pitch, Van Dyke's no-hitter only added a strike to his loss column.

"I had been aware that I was working on a no-hitter ever since the third inning," Van Dyke said. "But the only time I thought about it was when I was sitting on the bench. When I was on the mound, I just went about my business."

Kampf, for one, wasn't aware that anything special was going on until one of his players pointed it out to him in the sixth. But he was well aware how Van Dyke felt after the game.

"You're satisfied with your performance," Kampf explained, "but you're frustrated because you've just done a super job and you've got nothing to show for it."

Take it from a man who knows.

Watson rallies to win

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The minor disaster of a triple bogey-7 early in the tournament served as the turning point in Tom Watson's victory in the USF&G New Orleans Open Golf Tournament.

Watson returned to that jarring experience — a shot out of bounds that could have knocked him out of the tournament — after he'd scored a two-shot triumph in a successful defense of his title.

"That was just stupid," he said of the triple bogey in Friday's second round. At that point, he was far out of contention and was, in fact, in some danger of missing the cut for the final two rounds.

"I was really very mad at myself," he recalled yesterday. "I just had a little talk with myself. That's stupid. Really stupid. Get your act together. With a few good shots you can get back in the golf tournament."

And he did.

He salvaged a 69 in that round, followed that with a brilliant, 8-under-par 64 that put him in a tie for the top after 54 holes, then pulled away from Dr. Gil Morgan with a burst of three birdies in a four-hole stretch over the last nine.

He won it with a 270 total, 18 strokes under par on the 7,080-yard Lakewood Country Club course that, Watson said, is "maybe a little too easy. It's probably the easiest course we play on the Tour."

"With the greens as big as they are, and given these playing conditions, we're going to shoot lights out every time," he said.

The victory, worth $63,000 from the total purse of $350,000, came only two weeks after Watson had won the Masters and extended his history of making successful title defenses and scoring multiple triumphs. The outstanding player in the game since 1977, Watson now has scored 21 of his 27 career triumphs in only nine events. He has successfully defended tournament titles six times since the start of the 1977 season.

And he'll be looking at another title defense in his next start. He'll skip this week's Houston Open and will next compete in the Byron Nelson Classic, which he has won four times, including the last three.

Bruce Fleisher came out of the pack to take second with a 6-under-par 66 and a 272 total. The second place check of $37,800 was not only the largest of Fleisher's career, but also was more than he'd won in any of his previous 10 seasons as a touring pro.

Morgan, tied with Watson for the lead much of the way, dropped back to third with a 71-273. Barry Jaeckle was next at 69-275. Tied at 276 were rookie Fred Couples, Lon Hinkle, Ron Streck and Jay Haas.

From a tie for the top, Watson nailed it down with birdies from 10 and 6 feet on the 11th and 12th, padded his margin with a 20-footer on the 14th and then managed to save par after hitting one in the water on the 15th, giving him a three-shot lead with three holes to play.

But it was Morgan's putting problems over the front that gave Watson the opportunity to win it.

"If Dr. Gil had putted at all, he'd have won the tournament," Watson said. "He hit the ball very close to the hole on the first seven and made only one putt. If he'd had three or four birdies, got three or four in front, he'd probably have won."

CHECK IT OUT — Tom Watson jokingly tries to stuff the oversized check that was presented to him into his back pocket. That check, which was worth $63,000, was given to Watson after he won the New Orleans Open yesterday. It was his second tournament victory of the year.

Littler grabs Legends crown

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Gene Littler may have to get an armored car to drive to senior tournaments if he maintains his current rate of success.

Littler pocketed $35,000 yesterday as part of his swag when he teamed with partner Bob Rosburg to take the Legends of Golf Tournament by a stroke over Australians Peter Thomson and Kel Nagle.

The just-turned 50 Littler has now won $89,600 this year on the senior circuit. He won $50,000 little more than a month ago at the Vintage Tournament in Palm Springs, Calif., and earned $4,600 in another event.

"You and Ray Floyd are the leading money winners this year," said Rosburg, who earned the biggest check of his career in this fourth annual best-ball event.

"When's the next event?" asked the calm and composed Littler who birdied two of the last five holes. "I'll go to Canada next week then probably take some time off."

Littler became eligible for the Legends this year and immediately was paired with Rosburg, a golfing buddy for 25 years.

"We had never teamed before," said Rosburg. "And we had played golf together for a long time."

Littler, a former U.S. Open champion who won 29 tour events, made birdie putts on the 14th and 17th holes after it appeared he and Rosburg were going to blow a four-shot lead which they held when the day started.

Both double-bogeyed the par 3 No. 11 when they hit the same tree and their balls bounced into the same water hazard.

"I was about ready to dive into the pond," said Littler.

Nagle and Thomson made up five shots on three holes but the Californians prevailed with a final round 4-under par 66 for a 23-under par total of 257.

The late-closing Australians fired a 7-under par 63 over the par 70 Onion Creek Golf Club for 258.

PEEK-A-BOO — Chris Evert Lloyd appears to be playing a little peek-a-boo with the crowd at the Murjani Tennis Championship yesterday. Evert Lloyd seemed to let it all hang out as she defeated Martina Navratilova, 6-0, 6-0 for the title.

Evert Lloyd zips Martina in finals

AMELIA ISLAND, Fla. (AP) — Chris Evert Lloyd devastated defending champion Martina Navratilova 6-0, 6-0 yesterday to win the $250,000 Murjani Women's Tennis Association Championships at Amelia Island Plantation.

Nothing that Navratilova tried worked as the top-seeded Lloyd played flawlessly, polishing off the number-two seed in just 54 minutes.

Throughout the match, Lloyd placed shots where Navratilova wasn't. When she played at the net, Lloyd smashed them behind her, and when Navratilova volleyed from the corners Lloyd placed them opposite her, leaving no chance to return them.

Lloyd, who chalked up her 49th consecutive victory on clay, has been building lately on her game from the net. She played it effectively Sunday, but it was her usual strength from the baseline that buried her opponent.

Navratilova had said going into the match that she would try varying her game to try to prevent Lloyd from gaining momentum, but Lloyd quickly found it and had little trouble with Navratilova's drop shots, lobs and shots at the net.

Navratilova was unable to return nearly 20 of Lloyd's shots; another 20 she hit into the net. About the only thing Navratilova won was the coin toss for the first serve of the match.

Lloyd, considered the best women's tennis player in the world and the undisputed best on clay, boosted her record on clay to 174-1 since May 1973. This was the first time she and Navratilova played on clay since 1975, and never has Lloyd lost to her on that surface.

Lloyd's win earned her $32,000, while Navratilova share is $16,000.

After the awards ceremony, Navratilova promised to be back next year. "I hope I won't have to play Chris again," she said.

In the semi-finals Saturday, Lloyd buried Virginia Ruzici, 6-0, 6-2 and Navratilova beat Mimi Jausovec 6-3, 6-2 to advance to the nationally televised championship match.

Cosmos rip Rowdies

EAST RUTHERFORD (AP) — A goalkeeper with a fractured hand and a misguided midfielder inadvertently helped the Cosmos to a 4-1 victory over the Tampa Bay Rowdies.

The 20-minute late fireworks that netted the previously scoreless Cosmos enough goals to clinch the victory in the second half was partly attributed to Keith Bailey.

He widened the Cosmos' lead to 3-1 late in the game when he tried to kick the ball out of the pack, and it bounced once right past stunned goalkeeper Winston DuBose.

The goalie, meanwhile, was having problems of his own. Ten minutes into the match, the righthander broke his wrist and was forced to play the remaining 80 minutes southpaw.

Ricky Davis was among the few Cosmos aware of DuBose's difficulty before the game ended.

"I started to wonder after the first couple of times he handled the ball," said Davis, who scored the Cosmos' second goal. "I knew he was righthanded, and I knew something was wrong when he started throwing out balls with his left hand and picking it up with both hands."

Other Cosmos who scored were Roberto Cabanas and Giorgio Chinaglia, who connected his goal with just nine seconds remaining.

Oscar Fabbiani scored the lone Rowdie goal, giving Tampa Bay a 1-0 lead at the half.

Vladislav Bogicevic said the Cosmos weak showing early in the game grated on the team during the halftime break.

"Outside we were relaxed," Bogicevic said, "but inside we were like a tiger with a bullet in the bottom. We didn't get any speech (from Coach Hennes Weisweiler). He doesn't use too many words. But I really felt that we would play much better in the second half."

"The first 45 minutes were very boring. In the second, everybody got winds and used the faster speed we used in the first three games."

Chinaglia, the team captain and NASL scoring leader, said the tempo changed after Cabanas evened the score at 1-1.

"We needed a goal to get our confidence back. The team was much more relaxed after that," Chinaglia said. He conceded the tied score also forced the Rowdies to loosen up their defense in an attempt to break the stalemate.

"Earlier, the team was too contracted. Everyone seemed to be afraid to run into spaces or even to receive the ball. In the last 20 minutes, we got our act together," Chinaglia added.

The Cosmos opened their lead in the five-year home-and-away series with the Rowdies to 7-5, boosting their season record to 4-1. Tampa Bay dropped to 2-4.

Tampa's David Mehmet was forced off the field early in the second half after straining his right thigh.

In Tampa's first goal, Fabbiani, the NASL's 1979 scoring leader, picked off the ball from the Cosmos' Jeff Durgan, then shot it low past the young defender and into the extreme right corner of the net. Durgan was soon replaced by Cabanas.

Eagles top first poll

The first Daily Register Top 10 baseball poll has a familiar name at the top of the list in Middletown South High School.

The Eagles (8-1), the defending Top 10 champions, were upset by Raritan Tuesday, but came back to edge Middletown North, 4-2, and crush Long Branch, 16-8.

The win over Middletown North put the Eagles in a first place tie with Middletown North in the Shore Conference "A" Division North race. The two teams have 5-1 league marks.

Middletown South does not have the pitching strength of last year's "A" North and Monmouth County championship team, but it makes up for it with a solid hitting attack led by veterans John Johnson and Dave Lynch.

Moving up fast in the poll is second place St. John Vianney (9-1) which has won eight in a row since a 4-2 setback to Shore Regional April 6.

The Lancers defeated Christian Brothers Academy, 8-6, Monday and then stunned Ocean Township, 9-1, Wednesday. They followed it up with shutouts over Red Bank Catholic (2-0) and Raritan (3-0).

Middletown North (9-2), which had an eight-game win streak stopped by Middletown South Thursday, is third.

Ocean Township (5-2-1) is fourth despite losing to St. John, followed by Manasquan (8-3) in fifth place.

Newcomer Allentown, which joined the Shore Conference this year, makes its first appearance in any Daily Register poll and is a solid sixth. The Redbirds (6-1-1) have lost only to Manasquan, and that was a 13-inning, 7-6 thriller.

Holmdel (7-2), Freehold Township (6-3-1), Keypoint (6-3) and Christian Brothers Academy round out the Top 10.

Daily Register Top 10

1. Middletown South (8-1)
2. St. John Vianney (9-1)
3. Middletown North (9-2)

SAIL ON — Sail boats catch the hearty wind that blew across the Navesink River yesterday during the running of the sixth annual Long John Regatta. The regatta, which was sponsored by the Monmouth Boat Club, was won by Jim Carson of the Metedeconk Yacht Club of Brick Township.

Carson cops Long John

RED BANK — Jim Carson of the Metedeconk Yacht Club in Brick Township captured the sixth annual Long John Regatta championship yesterday on the Navesink River.

Carson finished second, seventh and first in his three races to lead a field of 41 competitors. Jody Lutz, also of the Metedeconk Y.C., was runnerup with a 3-1-7 finish and 11 points.

Bill Mergenthaler (1-3-20), Bill Ewing (15-5-8), Denis Farley (10-9-10) and Jon Schwartz (12-4-13) of the host Monmouth Boat Club were seventh through 10th, respectively.

Despite the shifting 10 to 20 knot winds, the races went off smoothly with only two spills over the four-mile course.

"It was a nice day and the people enjoyed it," said Farley.

Mergenthaler had a good shot at winning the championship with his first and third place finishes, but on his third race, he was caught in the favored end of the line with 15 other boats at the start and was never a factor in that race after being bumped by some of the other competitors.

The Monmouth Boat Club will resume its Spring Series the next three weekends before hosting a Memorial Day Regatta.

Long John Regatta Regatta Summaries

1. Jim Carson, Metedeconk Yacht Club (2-7-11-10); 2. Jody Lutz, Metedeconk YC (3-1-7-11); 3. Jay Lutz, Metedeconk YC (5-2-8-14); 4. Don Halligan, Sodas Bay YC, N.Y. (9-4-4-19); 5. Products of today: Most are called better than before more complex." That means more things can go wrong.

— There is a shortage of skilled repairmen, particularly in the auto industry. What starts as a minor problem becomes a major headache when it isn't fixed the first time.

— We know more than we used to. Older products may have had just as many potential hazards, but we weren't aware of them. There was no mechanism for recalling unsafe items, for example. "The general quality (of products) has improved over the years," said John Bell, spokesman for the Consumer Product Safety Commission. But he said that publicity about problems has made the public more aware of them.

— There is no fixed definition of quality. Is durability the test? Cost? Is a new, lightweight, three-speed hairdryer that costs $15.95 and lasts two years better or worse than an older, heavier, two-speed model that cost $29.95 and lasted five years? How important are energy efficiency and safety? Nader said, for example, that people don't think about auto safety until they have an accident. "It's the rattles and the bugs that people complain about," he said.

At Consumers Union, Florman said: "Except for automobiles, I'd have to say things are better than they used to be. Major appliances are probably better than they've ever been. TV sets are terrific."

The automakers take exception to Florman's exception. "By any objective measure, they (cars) are made better," said Thomas H. Hanna, senior vice president of the Motor Vehicle Manufacturers Association. He said today's autos need less regular maintenance and fewer repairs than older models.

"We feel that our people are committed to building the best product we can," said Don DeVito, quality control director at the General Motors assembly plant at Tarrytown, N.Y., which produces X-cars, the compacts GM introduced in 1979 to compete with the imports.

GM is staking its quality reputation on its forthcoming J-cars, subcompacts which will go on sale May 14. The company says it has improved "fits and finishes" — things like body work and joints. The side frame of the four-door model will be stamped in one piece to eliminate joints and weld marks. Robots will be used for some of the welding and to check the accuracy of things like windshield size.

The number of automobiles recalled every year already has declined. Just under four million domestic vehicles were recalled last year, compared to about seven million in 1979; eight million in 1978 and a record 10.7 million in 1977.

At the same time, however, 62 percent of the more than 2,500 people questioned in January by the marketing research firm of H.R. Bruskin said the quality of new automobiles was not as good today as it was 5 or 10 years ago.

Other products fared nearly as poorly. Fifty-one percent of those surveyed said furniture isn't as good as it used to be; more than 45 percent said the quality of appliances and clothing was down. In each case, less than 20 percent of the public said quality had improved.

John Nevin, chairman of Firestone Tire & Rubber Co., disagrees. "American quality tends to be very good," he said. "The perception of shoddy American quality is a uniquely American perception," Nevin added, citing airplanes, computer technology and weapons systems as examples of U.S. products that are in demand around the world.

Leek also said the perception of poor quality is important. "Whether it's true or not becomes somewhat immaterial," he said.

Leek said that foreign manufacturers have "done a wonderful job in the past 15 years" of making their products last longer. "They have made quality part of the management woodwork."

offered, with dividends reinvested. I don't know much about it, but I did notice that the share price dropped recently to 16 N.L. from the 1980 year-end price of 20 N.L. Would you advise trading it for something else? P.R., Nebraska

A — The "N.L." stands for no-load fund, which means that the shares sell at a price equal to net asset value. N.A.V. for One William Street is currently around $18.40 per share, or right about in the middle of the two prices you quote. The drop in price which you mention reflects in part the payment in January of $2.49 in capital gains and income distributions. I would advise a hold on this quality growth stock fund. Performance over the past decade has been about average for funds of this type, and the near-term outlook is improved, given the more favorable market conditions and increasing investor interest in growth stocks. The One William Street portfolio emphasizes the energy, financial services, and health care industries, and includes large positions in such stocks as IBM, General Reinsurance, Halliburton, General Electric, and Johnson & Johnson. With reinvestment of the 4 percent dividend yield, your original investment will show that much more growth. Hold.

S&L withdrawals reach record high

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal regulators said yesterday that customers of savings and loan associations withdrew a record high $2.3 billion more than they deposited last month, but a top official cautioned against overstating the associations' problems.

"The monthly flow of savings should not be confused with the underlying viability of the savings and loan industry," said Richard T. Pratt, chairman of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board.

"The viability of the savings and loan industry is based on the $30 billion net worth held by the individual associations," Pratt said in a news release.

The new report by the board, which monitors and regulates savings and loan associations, said the March figure of $2.3 billion broke the previous record of $1.5 billion reported for July 1966 and April 1979.

The report noted that the associations did show an overall deposit gain of $3.6 billion in March because of interest the associations credited to existing savings accounts. But even that gain was down 18 percent from April 1980.

March's new-deposit results brought net new savings receipts down to a negative $800 million for the first three months of 1981, the first quarterly loss since the $2.9 billion outflow in the third quarter of 1974.

The poor showing in new deposits last month hurt home-loan activity, the board added.

A NEW YOU

Expert suggests hot water for dry skin

By EMILY WILKENS

Out of force of habit, most of us finish off a face washing by splashing icy cold water on skin. Skin care expert Kay Fiedler says it is not always the right thing to do. Kay, who is vice president and general manager of the Erno Laszlo Institute, believes hot water is a beautifying aid for dry skin.

"Hot water is important to all kinds of skin, but especially dry skin," she told me in a recent interview. "Dry skin needs hot water to have that glowing look."

The reason? "Moist, warm skin is the ideal recipient of skin care preparations," she explained. "Thus, it is important to apply your moisture lotion or night cream immediately after washing or rinsing with hot water. It will be absorbed into the skin much faster and accomplish its purpose much quicker."

This rule doesn't apply only to dry skin: "Even a preparation to control excessive oiliness needs to be applied immediately after the washing ritual while the skin is still warm and moist," Kay said.

FINISHING TOUCH

Kay believes that face powder is essential for "the finished, polished look of superb skin."

"In a star's dressing room, there is always a jar of loose face powder," she pointed out, "because it's the only way to achieve that poreless look. But there's a trick to applying face powder. You must 'flour' the skin. Choose a light, never dark, transparent powder. Cover the face with it. Then use a cotton ball to rub it into skin. Buff skin with the cotton ball to make sure all traces of face powder have disappeared. Your face will look white and floured and you'll hate the look but in 10 minutes your reflection will show a flawless, finished, elegant look that only face powder can achieve."

Kay who is trained in the discipline of the Laszlo skin care regimen believes a woman should make a commitment to skin care.

"Develop your skin care program and stay with it," she advised. "One of the mistakes many of us make is to jump from preparation to preparation as we read advertisements. It requires six months to a year before you really know what a program is doing for you. Skin doesn't change dramatically in a few days. It takes months of care to see what a program does for your skin. When you find the right program, stay with it."

JUST FOR YOU

Dear Emily: What can I do about brown hair that's fading to a mousy shade? I don't want to dye it but I've got to do something as it's dull and drab. — R.G.

Dear R.G.: You could consider using a temporary rinse to brighten your hair color. You also might add gloss by using this home-made treatment:

Separate two eggs. Add a few drops of castile shampoo to the whites and beat to a froth. Apply to hair, lathering up as you would with any shampoo to loosen surface soil. Apply more "shampoo," lather up again, and massage in. Rinse. Next, whip yolks until lemony in color and massage into hair. Let stand a few minutes, and then rinse extra well with lukewarm, not hot, water. Conclude with a rinse made by adding ½ cup cider vinegar to a quart of water, then follow with a cold water rinse.

If you'd like more beauty recipes, you'll find them in my "Natural Beauty Aids" bulletin which can be obtained by sending 50 cents and a self-addressed, stamped envelope to me, Emily Wilkens, in care of this newspaper.

EMILY WILKENS welcomes letters, but cannot undertake to answer each one. She will use questions of general interest in her column. Address your letters to Emily Wilkens, care of this newspaper.

Advice

ANN LANDERS

Help for distraught parents

Dear Ann Landers: Please print this for those parents with the "unreachable, mixed-up, always-in-trouble teenager." I know where they are coming from. My husband and I have been there, and there is no hell like it.

We, too, were desperate and without hope. Our son was a bum, in debt, stealing from us, on drugs, breaking up the furniture, cursing and hitting us. We were beside ourselves with anxiety and fear. We tried everything to please him and nothing worked. The nicer we were, the worse he got.

Finally, we called the police. They gave us the phone number of an organization called "TOUGHLOVE." From that day on we became members of a community network of parents who are successfully coping with the unbelievable behavior that their kids are dishing out.

Before we came to TOUGHLOVE we were ashamed and felt weak and guilty because we couldn't stand up to our son. We thought nobody in our community had failed so miserably as parents. Then we met other members of TOUGHLOVE, and knew we were no longer helpless. We had the support of other parents, the police, the schools, the courts and the rehabilitation facilities. We didn't have to throw our son out, nor did we have to continue to take his abuse. We laid down a whole new set of rules and gave him a choice. He chose to STAY.

I'm enclosing a little pamphlet that tells you more about TOUGHLOVE. Please, Ann, share it with your readers. It is the greatest thing that could have happened to us, and we want to spread the word. Thanks for your help. — Forever Grateful In Bucks County, Pa.

Dear Forever: It is I who am grateful. Bless you for sharing. Here are some facts for those who need them.

TOUGHLOVE is a program to help parents who are troubled by their teen-agers' behavior in school, within the family, their involvement with drugs, alcohol and the law.

TOUGHLOVE asks you to choose which road you will travel. Will it be confrontation, firm guidelines and mutual respect — or excuses, denial, helplessness, indulgence and bribery?

TOUGHLOVE teaches you to face the crisis, take a stand, demand cooperation and meet challenges.

TOUGHLOVE will help you develop new strengths so you can give your young person a sense of direction and support.

Phyllis and David York, the founders of TOUGHLOVE, say: "We know how helpless you feel when your kid is in trouble. You are not alone. Many parents in your community are having similar problems and also feel isolated, guilty and ashamed."

"We realize it is difficult for you to reach out at a time like this, but we have seen the lives of many who join a TOUGHLOVE parent support group change dramatically. Take a risk and come to a parent group so you can judge for yourself."

"Write to TOUGHLOVE, Community Service Foundation, P.O. Box 70, Sellersville, Pa. 18960, or phone (215) 766-8022. We are here to help you."

YOUR HEALTH

Book for family health

By LESTER L. COLEMAN, M.D.

The regularity with which books on health are published is an indication of the rightful concern that this nation has about good health. Many of these books are specifically slanted and are often confusing. Far too many of them are touted as being the "home doctor" that makes consultation with the family physician unnecessary.

Some books actually help to solidify the relationship between doctor and patient, a relationship that is of enormous importance in the total structure of health care.

One such book was brought to my attention. It is specifically aimed at reinforcing the doctors' message to their patients and at the same time clarifying areas of confusion.

Dr. Isadore Rosenfeld of New York City is a friend and colleague who is distinguished by two most significant characteristics. He cares about his patients and he is available to them.

In his excellent book, "Second Opinion," published by Linden Press, Dr. Rosenfeld — with gentleness, humor, wisdom and medical competence — offers a practical guide to intelligent understanding of health and disease.

"Second Opinion" is a valuable book. It will give better insight to the patient of the processes by which the doctor arrives at a diagnosis and determines the ideal course of treatment.

It is a well-established fact that if any single book can transplant from its pages a single idea, then the arduous task of writing is more than adequately compensated.

In "Second Opinion," many such significant concepts will help the patient identify with the doctor and will undoubtedly make them both beneficiaries of Dr. Rosenfeld's good judgment.

We have just learned that a close relative of ours has active tuberculosis. We are not a wealthy family. We are middle-class people. We thought that tuberculosis didn't exist in people of good hygiene and nutrition. We don't live close to our relative, but from time to time we see her. Should this be of concern to us? — Mr. S.S.C. N.D.

Dear Mr. C.: Your story runs contrary to the generally-accepted notion that tuberculosis no longer exists, and, unfortunately, it is one that is repeated thousands of times all over this country. Tuberculosis is still a disease that takes a huge toll of health and life in America and around the world.

It is a common error to believe that this virulent disease has been completely wiped out by wonder drugs. This is totally false and often leads to carelessness and disregard of the early symptoms of tuberculosis. The tubercle bacillus, responsible for tuberculosis in all its forms, has no special respect for wealth, social position or intellectual accomplishment.

Tuberculosis is popularly thought to affect only the lungs. This too is false, for in its advanced stages it can attack every organ of the body.

There are many tests — the tuberculin test, the Mantoux test, the heat test, the tine test, and others — by which the disease can be diagnosed. X-rays of the chest at regular intervals can pick up tuberculosis in its very early stages. The control of tuberculosis, through the concentrated use of antibiotics and excellent nourishment, is a remarkable testimonial to modern medicine.

One of the purposes of the Monmouth County Cotillion Committee is to work with the young people to provide incentives "in their exploration of advance endeavors and career activities." This purpose coupled with the need to have a fund-raising event in conjunction with the OCEAN TOWNSHIP — Ocean Township Hadassah will meet tomorrow at 8 p.m. in the Jewish Community Center, Deal Park, to hear Dr. Thomas A. Shostak, chairman of the Interdisciplinary Studies at Brookdale Community College, Lincroft, talk on improving relationships within a marriage.

Guild meeting

EAST BRUNSWICK — The Handcraft Guild of Central Jersey will meet tomorrow at 7 p.m. in the East Brunswick Public Library, Jean Walling Civic Center.

Annual Debutante's Cotillion, has brought about the birth of this annual fashion show and luncheon, which has engendered great excitement among the young participants.

During the past years many of the parents of the debutantes or escorts have hosted parties after the Cotillion, but as the number of participants have escalated to a point where no one family could accommodate the debutantes and escorts, the parties have ceased.

As an alternative in the last few years, the Cotillion committee was able to raise enough funds to provide the "debs" and escorts with an outing. Last year they were taken to Paradiso's in Newark, and the year before, to Emerald City, Cherry Hill. But, funds are scarce.

In order to be able to continue these annual outings, the committee has held dances and other events, but the greatest response has been to the fashion show and luncheon, in which the debutantes and escorts were the models.

Cotillion "debs" and escorts were screened by Bette Whittaker of Lakewood, who worked with them to put on a professional fashion event. It was evident that they took pride and delight in their achievements on the fashion runway — all part of something glamorous and adult and complete with audience applause.

The debutantes and escorts modeled outfits from their own wardrobes.

Your horoscope, birthday

MONDAY, APRIL 27
Born today, you are a highly disciplined person capable of working through the most difficult problems in calm, orderly fashion. There may be times in your life when you will give in to personal weaknesses, but you will never allow your weaknesses to stand in the way of your career success. You have a gift for surrounding yourself with precisely those people who can be of greatest help to you. Your instinct for spotting the "losers" of this world keeps you from falling in with the "wrong" company. Straightforward, somewhat stern, and always concerned, you may strike some as being too intense. Most, however, particularly those who work with you, appreciate your "strictly business" approach. In fact, they may depend upon it for their own feeling of career success.

Also born on this date are: Ulysses S. Grant, U.S. president; Jack Klugman, actor.

TUESDAY, APRIL 28
TAURUS(April 20-May 20) — Spotlight career matters today. Don't allow yourself to fall behind the competition. Learn new methods.

GEMINI(May 21-June 20) — Though you may be taken by surprise, you can still impress others with your tact. Move carefully at evening.

CANCER(June 21-July 22) — Follow your own natural instinct and you will make the most of a little today. Friends help out at evening.

LEO(July 23-Aug. 22) — Additional family responsibilities may make it impossible for you to take advantage of a career opportunity.

VIRGO(Aug. 23-Sept. 22) — Make an effort to answer all questions in a civil way, regardless of annoyances and irritations.

LIBRA(Sept. 23-Oct. 22) — It will be to your advantage to overlook small infractions of the household rules. Demonstrate leniency.

SCORPIO(Oct. 23-Nov. 21) — Make hay while the sun shines! There's no time like right now for putting your personal house in order!

SAGITTARIUS(Nov. 22-Dec. 21) — A clear-headed approach to unexpected difficulties yields solutions before day's end. Don't panic!

CAPRICORN(Dec. 22-Jan. 19) — A promising morning in terms of finances. Be ready to share the wealth should benefits accrue suddenly.

AQUARIUS(Jan. 20-Feb. 18) — Care in a.m. should result in progress where a new project is concerned. Don't rock the boat!

PISCES(Feb. 19-March 20) — Your own hunches and advice of experts may not agree. You would do well to wait before making up your mind.

ARIES(March 21-April 19) — Personal affairs may appear more complicated than they really are. Concentrate on fulfilling a promise.

Sheinwold's bridge advice

By Alfred Sheinwold

You never guess wrong if you're the seventh son of a seventh son. But study today's hand if you're an ordinary mortal.

At the second trick you take the ace of spades and lead the low spade. West plays low. Do you play dummy's queen or ten? Assume that you can't see the cards held by the opponents.

Your guess makes a difference if one opponent has K-x-x and his partner J-x-x. But for every case in which the queen wins there is an opposite case in which the ten works. To put it another way, one guess is as good as the other if the spades are divided 3-3.

THE DIFFERENCE

When the spades are divided 4-2, your guess makes no difference except when East has J-x. To provide for that possibility you must play dummy's queen. It won't happen often, but it's better to have a slight advantage rather than a slight disadvantage. Moreover, if you remember that this is the "percentage" play you can always make it without agony, saving your brains for more important matters.

DAILY QUESTION
Partner bids one heart, and the next player doubles. You hold: ♠ J 4 ♥ Q 8 5 4 ♦ 10 9 4 ♣ Q 10 7 2. What do you say?

ANSWER: Bid three hearts. A jump raise after an opponent's takeout double promises four-card (or better) trump support but little else. With a better hand you would redouble or bid four of his suit. Your object is to interfere with the enemy's bidding.

ASK DR. BROTHERS

Male nurses evoke change

By DR. JOYCE BROTHERS

Dear Dr. Brothers: I've been a nurse in a major metropolitan hospital for 15 years. In the last two years, a number of male nurses have joined our staff and it just kills me when I see what a difference their presence has made. I welcome the changes, but why couldn't women have done this for themselves? These male nurses let the doctors know promptly that they didn't intend to be treated like mindless slaves. As a result, many of the most arrogant, sexist physicians have become a little more considerate. They still think of themselves as gods, but they temper their irritation and are less sarcastic. As a result, the patients too are better treated because there's less tension and anger among the nurses. — R.N.

Dear R.N.: Just as women are entering fields formerly reserved for males, men are taking jobs that were once held almost exclusively by women. I've received a number of letters from both males and females about this and most people seem to be pleased with the results of the turnabout.

A research group reports that from 1972 to 1978, the number of male secretaries rose 24 percent, telephone operators 38 percent and nurses 94 percent. Men in traditional female jobs often move up the ladder fast, partly because they're more assertive, and partly because there's still a strong bias in favor of males. Sexism exists in most offices and certainly is prevalent in hospitals.

Donald Olayer, a male nurse, predicts that once there's a 30 or 40 percent ratio of men in nursing you'll see salaries and the whole status of the job improve.

Dear Dr. Brothers: Our daughter is in her second year at college and she just informed us that she lives in a coed dorm. I can't believe this, but even some bathrooms are shared. We're from a small town and I guess, we're not very sophisticated, but I think this is disgusting. I'm also upset because our girl failed to mention this before. Whatever happened to good, old-fashioned modesty, I wonder? I'm frankly mad and if I could take time off from my job, I'd march up to that university and have a talk with the dean about this. My wife is also upset, but she seems to be spending most of her time trying to quiet me. She doesn't want to do anything or take any action. She says, she trusts our daughter and that it's up to her. What's your view? — A.V.

Dear A.V.: I agree with your wife. I believe because of the extreme double standards held by many of the over-40 generation, it's difficult to understand that young men and women could experience coeducational dorms as a kind of extended family where there are many brothers and sisters. Judging from the young people themselves, this often is how it's viewed.

I suspect, that this daily close proximity helps prepare both sexes for their roles in later life. Each learns that the opposite sex is in many ways similar to him or her. There's really nothing very sensual about watching someone brush his or her teeth, or about seeing a weary student try to wake up in the morning by dashing cold water on his or her face. Students tend to build respect for the opposite sex and cast away the old stereotypes. Don't draw hasty conclusions. Listen to what your daughter has to say about this.

HINTS FROM HELOISE

Conserving paper towels

DEAR HELOISE:

I use paper towels in my kitchen, bath and in my boat galley.

To save on about 50 percent of their use, I cut the new roll of toweling nearly in half, stopping short of the cardboard core.

I find half a towel is sufficient for quick wipe ups! If more is needed for large spills or jobs, then just tear off both sides. — Pearl S. Hood

ALL STUCK UP

Dear Heloise: Please help! I have several rolls of transparent tape and the ends have disappeared.

Do I have to throw them away or do you have a way of salvaging them? — A.D.W.

Don't try using a knife or you might end up cutting through several layers of tape, thus ruining that much more of the stuff.

Drop the roll into a small container of hot water — after removing it from the dispenser.

Leave it in the water for only a very few seconds and you'll be surprised at the results. — Heloise

LETTER OF LAUGHTER

Dear Heloise: My husband is an electrician and he has his own shop right next door to our house.

One day I was combing my little girl's hair and exclaimed that she sure had a lot of electricity in her hair.

Her reply? "I've been staying in my Daddy's shop too much!" — Imogene

Aren't kids precious in their innocence! — Heloise
